Fifty Fail To 'Crash' Civil Rights Conference

Twenty Credentials Forged; Delegates From Eleven CIO Unions Barred

More than 50 persons were denied registration yesterday by the strongly anti-Communist National Emergency Civil Rights Mobilization, meeting here to urge the Eighty-first Congress to enact the President's civil rights program.

Through a tight screening of would-be registrants, officials of the mobilization said they discovered at least 20 cases where credentials were forged.

Barred from the three-day meeting, which opened yesterday, were representatives of 11 CIO unions now on trial for leadership by alleged Communists. Progressive Party representatives were also denied registration, but on the basis that no one from a political party would be recognized as such.

First Effective Ban

Willard Townsend, of Chicago, chairman of the credentials committee, said the screening "marked the first time Communists, Communist sympathizers and other elements have been barred effectively from a meeting of this sort."

Townsend, president of the CIO United Transport Service Employes Workers, said although there was no violence by rejected registrants, "there were grumblings and grousings."

Police were stationed both in the lobby of the registration headquarters, the Twelfth St. Branch of the YMCA, 1816 12th st. nw., and outside the building.

In one case of forged credentials, Townsend said, a block of perhaps 500 letterheads had been mimeographed without authorization. Signatures on some bona fide letterheads of sponsoring organizations were checked and found to be false.

Credentials were also rejected "on sight" by Townsend's committee members who knew the identity of others attempting to register.

Credentials in Order

Some known Communists—about 20 out of nearly 2000 delegates registered—were admitted because their credentials were in order, Townsend stated.

When the National Emergency Rights Mobilization was formed, about three months ago, it took a position that Communists would neither be welcomed nor admitted. The CIO, one of the sponsors, asked the Mobilization to bar the 11 member unions.

A file of letterheads and bona fide signatures was set up in advance. Intimations of possible Communist activity came, Town-

Wartime Chief, Retired in 1946, Kept Up Fight for Power in Air

By Marshall Andrews

Gen. Henry H. Arnold, first and last commanding general, Army Air Forces, died of a heart attack yesterday at his Sonoma (Calif.) ranch.

"Hap" Arnold, who was 63, had been in precarious health for some time. As a matter of fact, in 1944, he had been advised to retire from his important wartime post as chief of the Nation's air forces for physical reasons. His reaction was typical.

"He should have quit during the war when he had his first attack," said Dr. Russell V. Lee of Palo Alto, Calif., his physician. "But things were hot then and he decided to take his chances with the rest of the soldiers and went back to duty."

General Arnold died about 7:25 a. m. (PST) yesterday after collapsing in his bedroom. Dr. R. L. Mollenhauer, called by Mrs. Arnold, pronounced death due to a coronary occlusion.

General Arnold recently had suffered a series of heart attacks and had remained quietly at his Valley of the Moon ranch since last October. He had, however, attended a party Friday night for Walter R. Murphy, publisher of the weekly Sonoma Tribune. There, according to friends, he had appeared unusually pale but had seemed in high spirits, joking and telling stories from his seemingly bottomless store.

When he rose yesterday morning, according to Dr. Lee, he apparently felt well. After going to

GOP Sets Up Unit to Check On U. S. Costs

Taber Named Head Of 21-Member House Group to Watch Outlay Measures

NYHT News Service

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, Republican House leader, yesterday announced the appointment of a "price tag" committee of 21 Republican Representatives to keep tab on the cost of proposed legislation before Congress.

The committee, headed by Representative John Taber of New York, will be charged with analyzing legislative proposals and publicizing their cost, Martin said. He said appointment of the committee became necessary "because of the increasing tendency on the part of the Truman Administration to refuse to give cost estimates to Congress and the public."

"The Congress has been repeatedly asked to enact blindly Administration programs involving the ultimate expenditure of billions of dollars, without so much as a preliminary estimate of cost being made or on the basis of figures of highly questionable authenticity," Martin asserted.

Divided Into Subgroups

"Two notable examples of this have been the so-called Brannan plan to socialize agriculture and the so-called Ewing plan to socialize medicine."

Taber said the new committee will be divided into sub groups to which in turn will be parceled out legislation to analyze and report on costs. The findings will be combined in a detailed report to be made public the first of the next month, he said. Bills will be "minutely examined" for hidden items that would shoot costs to unexpected heights in future years, Martin said.

Taking note of the Administration policy of deficit financing, Martin said that "in his message, President Truman outlined some 30 legislative proposals for enactment, of which the overwhelming majority would require huge additional outlays of money."

Other Members Named

"With the American people now alarmed as never before about red ink spending in times of relative prosperity, it is my belief that they will welcome this establishment of the price tag committee as an instrument to help bring about lowered Government costs, reduce taxes and reduce prices," Martin said.

Besides Taber, other Republicans on the committee include:

Senators Call Acheson For Further Hearing After Peiping Incident

Demand for Review Of Far East Policy Grows in Light of Events of Weekend

By Coleman B. Jones
NYHT News Service

The drastic weekend turn of events in Communist-dominated China forces Secretary of State Dean Acheson to prepare today for another round of questioning by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Tuesday on the Administration's controversial Far East policy.

Senators already aroused by the loss of China as a free nation made it clear they wanted first-hand information on the Communist seizure of the United States Consulate General in Peiping and the consequent order for withdrawal of all 135 American consular employes remaining in that country.

Closed Hearing Likely

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, disclosed that he expected Acheson to return before his group Tuesday. He said the Secretary, who put in much of last week explaining Administration policies to Senators and Representatives, would be heard behind closed doors unless he wanted to discuss the new developments in public.

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), a member of the committee and a leading critic of the Administration's course in China, said he would like to have the new hearing held in the open, "unless that would involve security considerations and the jeopardizing of American lives."

"The American people," he said, "are entitled to know all about the situation as soon as it is safe to make the information public."

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), another leading critic of the Administration's China policy, who is not a member of the committee but expects to be invited again to sit in on its session with Acheson, likewise indicated a hope that it could be held in public. He said he wanted as much of the discussion as possible to be in the open, so that the press and public could be adequately informed.

Chinese Communists Also Seize Property Of French and Dutch; Americans Packing

By The Associated Press

Chinese Communist authorities at Peiping have seized two more pieces of foreign diplomatic property — this time belonging to the Dutch and the French.

The State Department said yesterday it occurred at about the same time the Red police and civilian authorities, disdaining American protests, seized the most important of the four American Consulate compounds in the Red capital.

It was this action which prompted Secretary Acheson, with President Truman's approval, to order all remaining American diplomats out of Communist China. His directive, dispatched Saturday, told 135 American consular and embassy officers and their dependents to ask for permits to leave and head for home as soon as possible.

Prepare to Leave

The American groups at Shanghai and Nanking yesterday acknowledged receiving the Acheson order and State Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said it was assumed here that all American officials in China "are proceeding at once on their orders to get out." However, even if the Communist authorities cooperate in this mass exodus, it will be at least a month, possibly much longer, before the great retreat from China is finally completed.

Seizure of the American compound, which has housed the consulate office, was carried out by the Communists at 9:50 a. m. Saturday, China time. American officials required time to clear out their files and possessions and were finally given until midnight Sunday to complete the task. It was assumed in Washington that the job was completed without incident.

Reports to the State Department from Consul General O. Edmund Clubb said the Chinese had been courteous in their treatment of the Americans. McDermott said seizure of the Netherlands and French properties was set in motion Friday—evidently when the Communist police first showed up—and was completed Saturday.

Treaty Terms Negated

The State Department said the Dutch property seized was described as the east compound of the old Netherlands Embassy establishment; that the French property taken over was described as the former barracks of the French Embassy. Like the United States,

Nationalists Heartened by Peiping Rift

Taipei, Formosa, Jan. 15 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalists were heartened today by the unexpected effectiveness of their air force and by the new friction between the United States and the Peiping Communist regime.

Even critics of the air force conceded that its new wallop raised their hopes of repelling an expected Communist assault on this island refuge of the Nationalist government.

High Nationalist quarters also were optimistic that the Communist seizure of United States consular property in Peiping might cause Washington to reconsider and furnish further aid for maintaining the Formosan redoubt.

At a dinner tonight for Philip Jessup, United States roving ambassador, Premier Yen Hsi-shan spoke hopefully of "our future

Spear-Pierced Bodies Discovered in Grave After Wide Search

Manila, (Monday), Jan. 16 (AP).—Two American university professors, their bodies pierced by spears, have been found in a shallow grave in the wild mountains of northern Luzon where headhunters used to roam.

The discovery was reported by a U. S. 13th Air Force patrol. It had been in on the two-week ground and air search for Dr. Robert F. Conklin and Prof. Marvin Pittman. The patrol reached the grave in the Ifugao country some 200 miles northeast of Manila late yesterday.

Col. James L. Meader of the U. S. Embassy said the patrol reported three Ifugaos had confessed spearing the educators and burying the bodies after robbing them. The patrol said the three Ifugas implicated three other natives who were being sought.

The grave was found yesterday by Filipino trackers with the Air Force ground patrol.

The patrol told Meader the two Amercans, exchange professors at University of the Philippines, were slain Christmas day or the day after.

The intensive search for the professors started January 5. That was five days after they were due to finish their projected 10-day trip at Baguio, summer capital of the Philippines.

Meader said Mrs. Conklin, who is in the United States, had been informed of the finding of the bodies. Mrs. Pittman, who was in Manila, left this morning to view them.

Conklin formerly was a professor of English at Springfield (Mass.) College. Pittman was a geographer from Chicago.

Discovery of the bodies brought to five the number of Americans slain in remote areas of the Philippines within two months.

FBI Security Wiretaps Put At 170 Total

Hoover in Statement Assails 'Half-Truths' Uttered on Practice

By The Associated Press

The FBI has 170 telephones in the United States and its possessions tapped in connection with internal security investigations, Director J. Elgar Hoover of the FBI said last night.

Hoover said in a special statement this fact contradicts "the hysterical utterance of those who would have us believe that wiretapping by the FBI is unrestricted and is utilized on a wholesale basis."

His comments formed part of a running commentary that the Department of Justice has been conducting with its critics over the use of wiretapping in obtaining evidence.

J. Lawrence Fly, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, is among those who have been most outspoken against the practice. Last week Attorney General J. Howard McGrath defended it as an established policy of the department.

"In recent weeks there has been an increased circulation of inaccurate information and half-truths on wiretapping," Hoover said.

"Statements have been made which are so untrue and legally unsound that I am forced to conclude that they were motivated for the purpose of confusing the public. . . .

"I dare say that the most violent critic of the FBI would urge the use of wiretapping techniques if his child were kidnaped and held in custody. Certainly there is as great a need to utilize this technique to protect our country from those who would enslave us and are engaged in treason, espionage and subversion and who if successful would destroy our institutions and democracy."

25,000 Defy Lewis Order To Dig Coal

Pittsburgh, Jan. 16 (Monday) (AP).—Approximately 25,000 United Mine Workers in Pennsylvania remained off the job today for the second consecutive week—despite John L. Lewis' suggestion they dig coal.

However, 31 locals in northern West Virginia decided to resume digging. The locals have a membership of 10,000.

Local after local in the rich Fayette County (Pa.) fields voted to continue the unexplained strike of a week ago that idled 69,000 soft coal diggers.

"We're just tired of being pushed around," declared one veteran miner. "This thing must come to a head."

"Five days or nothing," was the explanation of a United Mine Worker local official.

The miners have been working a three-day week since their contract ran out last June 30. Lewis ordered the short workweek as a substitute for the traditional no-contract, no-work policy of the UMW.

Carey Asks Congress Action in Blast at Management 'Deals'

By the United Press

Chairman James B. Carey of the CIO's new electrical workers union yesterday called for a Congressional investigation of alleged management support of Communist-led unions.

In a letter to all members of Congress, he repeated a charge he made last week that the General Electric Co., made a "collusive deal" with the GE local of the left-wing United Electrical Workers.

He said the company helped Local 301 collect UE dues by a payroll checkoff at the Schenectady, N. Y., plant. He said the company thus was guilty of a "clear act of favoritism and a violation of the law" because it had not given the same consideration to right-wing organizers.

UE and Carey's group, the International Union of Electrical Workers, have been locked in a fight to represent the half-million workers in the industry ever since the CIO ousted UE for following the Communist line.

The NLRB is scheduled to hear oral arguments today on an IUE petition for a bargaining election among General Motors electrical workers. And the board planned to continue a hearing in New York

Ice Crack Strands 1000 Fishermen, 250 Automobiles

Oshkosh, Wis., Jan. 15 (AP).—Nearly 1000 ice fishermen and more than 250 automobiles were marooned today when a strong, wind ripped loose the ice on Lake Winnebago.

Deputy Sheriff Marshall Muscavich said tonight all of the marooned people have been removed from the huge floe "as far as we know."

The automobiles, however, will remain on what pilots called "an island of ice," until a wind shift carries the floe back to shore or until the water gap freezes over.

Muscavitch said the crack spread so quickly that very few persons were able to leap to safety.

City Due to Get Taste of Winter Weather Today

While Washington kept happy in temperatures much milder than normal, winter covered much of the Nation yesterday.

Washington may get a slight taste of winter today for the Weather Bureau forecast that after a morning of mild temperatures the mercury will plunge to the 20s tonight.

But it will be nothing to rival in bitterness the wintry blasts that have swept other parts of the country.

As of last night, the violent weather had taken 39 lives, including five in Canada.

A roaring blizzard that cost nine lives hit the Northwest with its worst impact of the century Saturday, then tore out across the Great Lakes into Canada yesterday.

The blizzard stirred up 50-mile winds in Minnesota and the eastern Dakotas, and drew sub-zero air into its wake.

At least 18 inches of snow fell at Seattle and nine at Portland. It was 22 below zero at Omak, Washington.

Upstate New York was warned to expect snow squalls and winds up to 60 miles an hour today.

In Washington yesterday it got no colder than 37 at 7:05 a. m. and the thermometer got as high as 48 at 3:20 p .m.

In attacking the mayor's plan on both moral and economic grounds, Wicks was understood to be acting as unofficial spokesman for the Republican State administration of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. Republicans control the Legislature, and requests from the Democratic city regime generally don't get far without clearance with the majority leadership.

Boy Rescued From Ledge Above Water 40 Feet Deep

By Philip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

A 12-year-old boy missed death by a matter of a few feet when he fell 40 feet into an abandoned quarry near River rd., in Bethesda, Md., yesterday.

The boy, Marshall Gibson, of 214 Rosemary st., Chevy Chase, Md., suffered a fractured ankle.

Fortunately he landed on a jutting ledge which kept him from falling into 40 feet of icy water 9 feet below the ledge.

Rescue workers said that if the boy had gone into the water he would have drowned for the sides of the quarry are straight up and down.

The boy lay on the ledge for four hours while his younger brother, Carter, 9, ran 4 miles to his home to summon aid. Another brother, Robert, 6, remained at the quarry.

According to Montgomery County police at Bethesda, the boys were hiking and had halted at the quarry to photograph frogs. Marshall had gone down a wire cable to get a better view when he slipped and fell to the ledge. He suffered a broken ankle and severe shock.

Carter told his father, Douglas Gibson, of Marshall's plight and the father called the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad. The rescue truck with full equipment and an ambulance responded but could get only a mile from the scene.

British Arming 3 Arab Nations Under Treaty, Acheson Reports

By The Associated Press

Secretary of State Acheson confirmed in a letter made public last night that Britain has resumed shipment of arms to Iraq, Hashemite Jordan and Egypt under treaties with those Arab countries.

Writing to Representative Jacob K. Javits (R.-Lib., N. Y.), the Secretary said it was "no secret" and that the security of the Middle East is of great importance to the West. He added:

"It is desirable that the countries in this part of the world obtain from reliable and friendly sources such arms as they may need for their legitimate security requirements."

Javits had written Acheson on December 28, expressing concern that arms sent to Arab states would be used for a new attack against Israel. The New York Representative said Communist danger to the Near East would be greatest in the confusion growing out of any renewal of armed Arab action against the Jewish state.

Acheson, in his reply, which the Congressman made public, said the State Department's analysis of all available information does not indicate that any serious preparations are being made for a resumption of the Palestine fighting.

"Should such information be received," the Secretary wrote, "the United States Government would be quick to use all of its influence in an attempt to prevent such a tragic eventuality, both within the United Nations and outside."

Acheson said inflammatory statements have been made in both the 4-Year World Trade Plan Urged on U. N.

London, Jan. 15 (AP)—A group of five independent experts tonight urged the United Nations to adopt a three-to-four-year plan to balance world trade, and to establish machinery to automatically combat unemployment.

Declining employment over a three-month period would bring counter measures into operation.

The experts—two Americans, one Briton, a Frenchman and an Australian—proposed a conference of governments "of interested countries" to work out a joint program. In addition, various U. N. bodies would discuss the experts' recommendations.

Steps in World Front

The experts outlined eight broad approaches the governments could adopt, both domestically and internationally, to achieve these goals.

On a world basis, they recommended that the individual governments:

1. Confer under the auspices of the U. N. Economic and Social Council to carve out a plan for eliminating the present structural lack of equilibrium in world trade.

2. Create a stable flow of international investment to the world's underdeveloped areas. This would, apparently, be in line with President Truman's Point Four program. The group suggested these investments be channeled largely through the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

3. Adopt a scheme to be operated through the International Monetary Fund to prevent the international spread of deflationary pressures.

Action Urged at Home

The group proposed that the governments, at home:

1. Adopt and announce full employment goals.

2. Announce a comprehensive fiscal and production program for keeping on the road to full employment.

3. Adopt and make public a system of compensatory measures in case the general full employment program lags behind for three months in a row.

4. Let the public in on price stabilizing and inflation-combatting policies.

5. Bring legislative and administrative procedures in line to carry out the employment plan.

The group report was issued here by the United Nations Information Center. It was drawn up by Prof. John Maurice Clark of Columbia University; Prof. Arthur Smities of Harvard University; Prof. Nicholas Kaldor, fellow of King's College, Cambridge University; E. Ronald Walker, economic adviser to the Australian Department of External Affairs; Pierre Uri, economic and financial adviser to the Commissariat General du Plan, Paris.

It will be considered by the U. N. Economic and Employment Commission later this month and by the Economic and Social Council when it meets in February.

Arab and Israeli press concerning a renewal of the fighting.

But in this case the department does not believe, he added, that "the remarks of individual radio and press commentators should be taken as a reliable indication of any serious or immediate intent on the part of the respective governments to resume hostilities."

"Some of the warlike pronouncements of officials of Near Eastern governments may well have been made for the purpose of domestic consumption," Acheson said.

He told Javits that the British have made no secret of the fact that they have resumed arms shipments to Iraq, Jordan and Egypt since the Security Council lifted its embargo against sending arms to the Palestine area last August. And he said Britain "faithfully observed" that embargo while it was in effect.

"At the time the Security Council arms embargo was lifted," Acheson continued, "the United States and Great Britain stated that they did not wish to see an arms race develop in the Middle East.

"The United States stands by this policy, as does the United Kingdom to the best of the department's knowledge.

"Arms shipments to the Arab states and Israel should be limited to those necessary for the purpose of maintaining internal law and order . . . reasonable requirements of self-defense.

"With regard to the shipment of planes and light naval vessels to Egypt, it should be recalled that Egypt is an important and strategically located nation of 20 million people."

In his letter to the Secretary, Javits said:

"Our country should not shut its eyes to the facts, first, that balance in military capability is essential to stability in the Near East, and, second, that the Israelis have shown that they would be doughty fighters for independence and for freedom against any aggression from communism."

Major Problem

Jobs Scarce In Germany Despite Boom

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 15 (AP) Business is booming in western Germany and there are hundreds of thousands of new buildings needed—yet one out of every 10 employable persons is jobless.

Unemployment doubled last year, and now stands at the postwar record total of 1,558,000.

"Our industries cannot supply all these people with jobs and bread," Labor Minister Anton Storch told a press conference in Bonn last week.

Why, with such growing prosperity and so much work to be done, are there so many who can't find work?

Storch and Allied officials named these as the chief reasons:

1. West Germany's population is growing faster than its industries can recover from the war. There were 406,000 new job seekers who entered the Western zones during 1949—either as war prisoners returning from Russia or as fugitives from Communist-ruled Eastern Germany.

2. West Germany lacks capital to finance the industrial expansion and building program necessary to absorb these unemployed.

Storch offered only one faint hope of reducing the jobless count this year: A Government program to build 250,000 new dwellings may provide about 200,000 new jobs.

That obviously would be only a drop in the bucket.

Allied officials were even more pessimistic.

"I don't expect any real unemployment crisis this year," said one United States labor expert. "But unemployment is becoming West Germany's major economic problem. It may prove the hardest of all to solve."

West Germany's basic trouble, he pointed out, is that its population has grown by about eight million since the war. But its industrial capacity is less than before the war, because of bomb destruction.

"Its industries must be expanded to give these new residents work," he said. "New houses must be built for them to live in."

But this requires capital or credit. West Germany is short of both.

Germans complain that one thing complicating their credit problem is the Allied ban on foreign investments which has been in effect ever since the war.

High Allied officials have predicted that this ban may soon be lifted.

former foreign military barracks, Senator Smith said:

"This clearly indicates that the Communists' action is directly related to the question of recognition (the British and several other governments have extended recognition to the Chinese regime)—a squeeze play intended to try to drive us into line. Any intelligent person might have known that such action would make it impossible for us to extend recognition, either de facto or de jure, to such a government.

"The seizure of the American Consulate indicates a complete change in the outlook of the Chinese people, who have been friendly to us for 50 years, and obviously was dictated by the Kremlin. It confirms my view that this is a conquest of China by Russia through the familiar process of infiltration. It proves there is no longer a civil war in China in any sense of the word."

Tydings Defends Policy

Secretary Acheson's reappearance before the committee Tuesday is expected to have a fresh bearing on the hearing set for January 26 of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, whose recommendation for sending a military mission to help Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek prevent Communist conquest of Formosa, last stronghold of the Chinese Nationalists, was rejected by President Truman in favor of the hands-off policy espoused by the State Department.

The committee's decision to seek the views of Secretary Johnson and General Bradley was forced on its Democratic leadership by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, chief Republican architect of the bipartisan foreign policy now seriously threatened by the controversy over the Administration's course in the Far East.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Armed Services Committee, meanwhile, spoke in defense of the President's decision barring any hitherto unauthorized military aid to the Nationalists during his weekly recorded broadcast on Maryland stations.

Tydings agreed with Acheson's hope that the Chinese Communists would sooner or later turn against the Russians, and argued that, if the United States sent troops into Formosa and it were attacked, that might be the signal for the start of another world war.

The sending of more arms to the Nationalists there might force the United States to spread its strength too thin, Tydings added.

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) expressed hope that the decision to withdraw all diplomatic representatives from Communist-held China marked the start of a firmer policy.

"I would," he said, "hate to see anything develop that might threaten armed conflict, but it is high time we take some positive action against Communist China."

counteroffensive on the mainland."

Yen appealed for the peoples of China and the United States to "overthrow Communist aggression hand in hand."

Air headquarters announced tonight that during Sunday its raiders had sunk many Communist boats at Swatow and had sunk 40 vessels along the "invasion coast" opposite the Chusan Islands.

Swatow is the mainland port nearest Namoa Island, an offshore Nationalist base now under Communist attack. The Chusan Islands are the location of Nationalist air and sea bases for raiding Shanghai and enforcing the blockade of the Red coast.

In a review of 1949, the air force stated its planes had made 6433 flights, killing or wounding 173,000 Communist troops, destroying more than 2000 motor vehicles and 240 locomotives, and sinking or badly damaging 40 "big ships" and 10,000 junks.

It said that so far in 1950, it had destroyed or badly damaged 11 ships of 1000 tons each, plus 600 junks; had killed 2000 Red soldiers and destroyed 10 locomotives and 20 artillery posts.

Saar Unrest Seen Easing By Schuman

Bonn, Germany, Jan. 15 (AP).—French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman tonight poured oil on troubled waters in relations with western Germany over the Saar.

After a two-hour private talk with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, Schuman told a news conference it was the policy of his government that a solution of the Saar question must await a German peace treaty.

Adenauer yesterday told reporters the Saar question was causing disquiet in Germany. He, too, declared the status of the Saar, 738-square-mile coal mining valley, must not be decided before the writing of a formal German peace treaty and protested any attempt at a unilateral decision affecting Germany's frontiers.

Schuman said his talk with Adenauer was for the purpose of relieving tension between France and Germany and he believed that aim had been achieved.

German disquiet has been caused by reports that the French are negotiating with the autonomous government of the French-occupied Saar for 50 or 99-year leases on the coal mines. Schuman told his news conference these negotiations were dealing merely with practical necessities of the moment, and were in the interest of the Saarlanders, not of France alone. Any agreement, he added, would have to be confirmed by the peace treaty.

In answer to a question, he said the "people of the Saar do not want a plebiscite."

Regarding the role of Germany in defense of Western Europe, he said it would be "nonsense" (he used the English word) to disarm and then rearm Germany. It was only logical, he added, that the western occupation powers should take care of western Germany's security.

both those countries were reported to have other properties in Peiping which were not molested.

The Communist seizures were based on a proclamation issued January 6 for the seizure of former foreign military barracks in Peiping. The proclamation stated that such properties were based on "unequal treaties"—that is, treaties unfavorable to China—which have been abolished by the Communists.

United States protests accused the Chinese Reds of violating treaties which this Government considers still to be in force, including both a pact made at the time of the Boxer Rebellion 50 years ago and a 1943 Chinese-American treaty which brought the relations of the two countries up to date.

Paasikivi Enters Finn Race For Reelection as President

Helsinki, Finland, Jan. 15 (AP).—Finland's election campaign reached its climax today with formal announcement that 79-year-old President Juho K. Paasikivi has accepted the nomination to run for the post again.

The election will be conducted in two stages. Monday and Tuesday the people will vote for 300 electors who, on February 15, will meet in the Parliament Building to name the President for a six-year term.

Paasikivi is expected by most political observers to be returned to office. A Conservative Independent, he is the official candidate of the Social Democratic government party and also of the Conservatives, the Liberal Swedish Party and the Progressive Party. He is opposed by former Premier Mauno Pekkala, candidate of the Communist-dominated Popular Democrats, and Dr. Urho Kekkonen, speaker of Parliament and candidate of the strong Agrarian Party.

Political observers said Paasikivi's formal acceptance of the nomination was intended to put an end to rumors that he was not running. These rumors started after Vainoe Tanner, prominent Social Democrat, made a statement to the effect Paasikivi was not the candidate of the Social Democrats.

This indicated a split within the party, since Premier Karl-August Fagerholm, Social Democrat, several times mentioned Paasikivi as the party's candidate.

(In Moscow, Izvestia, official organ of the Soviet government, declared that Finnish "reactionary parties" were preparing in secret another presidential candidate from the Tanner group in case Paasikivi "for some reason is unsatisfactory to them." The paper said the Finnish people would not even know whom they were voting for unless they voted for Pekkala.)

of life from Eddie. Rescue experts say they fear he may be crushed under the coal fall at a lower level of the 68-degree slope.

Rescuers have penetrated to within 25 feet of where they believe Eddie is. They have heard nothing and believe there is no chance of reaching him tonight.

Work More Dangerous

As they dug their work became increasingly dangerous. Several shook their heads as they relieved a crew, saying the excavation caused the mine to "work." They explained that taking out dirt increased the possibility of further caveins.

Rescue teams are working in three hour shifts of eight or nine men each.

The workmen paused only long enough to bring Joe Burda to the surface.

He gupled down the chill fresh air.

"It's wonderful . . ." he said.

"I just sat and thought and prayed."

Then he told of his desperate effort to help his brother and his own attempt to blast his way with dynamite.

Had to Stop Shooting

"I had to stop shooting," he said, "I was afraid for the folks above . . . and I was afraid I'd start another fall."

After first aid at the mine face, Burda was rushed to the State hospital at Ashland, 10 miles away.

Hospital officials said he was in good condition and wanted to get up. Doctors said he suffered slightly from shock and insisted he stay in bed.

Later Joe told reporters that after the first rock fall he grabbed timbers and ran back to brace the slope over Eddie who was partly trapped in the debris.

Joe said the timbering around Eddie appeared in good condition just before the second fall.

It was this fall that trapped Joe about 55 feet down.

To reach Joe at this point, the diggers sank a narow, three-foot shaft at a 60-degree angle down to the slope to Burda.

Near the end of this small rescue shaft, they picked out rock, coal and dirt by hand lest they start a new cave in.

Shortly before midnight, a half-inch pipe was driven into the slope and rescue workers fed Burda egg, milk and a quantity of whisky through the tube.

Physical contact was made at 1 a.m. but State Mine Inspector Ben Reinhoel advised against any attempt to jerk him free and possibly start a last-minute disaster.

The rescue shaft was braced and enlarged. Then the diggers pulled Burda through at 5:16 a.m. after he had inched forward on hands and knees.

After bringing him to the surface, the workmen went into a gangway off the main 68-degree slope. They said they thought there might be another slope along the gangway connecting a gangway at a lower level. This would enable them to bypass the debris-littered main slope and possibly reach Eddie.

Mine experts say Eddie may be about 70 feet farther down the slope and about 120 feet below the surface.

Meanwhile, Joe was not told that his father is gravely ill at home from an attack of asthma, aggravated by the family tragedy.

Joe's wife, unable to bear the long vigil at the mine face, missed seeing her husband when he reached the surface. She went to the hospital later.

The new bonds are to mature at 10 million dollars a year from 1953 through 1962. The bank said bids will be received at its New York office until opening time, 11 a. m., January 25.

Johnson Lauds Unity Progress

By the United Press

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson yesterday said the armed forces have made "remarkable progress" toward unification despite differences that have arisen. He promised the policy of unification "is going to be carried out."

Speaking on the Armed Forces Hour, National Broadcasting Co. television program, Johnson said: "Unification is not designed to reduce the Army, Navy and Air Force . . . into a common, colorless and undifferentiated denominator.

"There will be no common uniform which would deprive the various services of the esprit de corps which is so important to their effective functioning."

Heart Attack Kills Gen. Hap Arnold

the bathroom, he returned to bed and almost immediately was dead.

Retired in 1946

While funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday, General Arnold will be buried in Arlington Cemetery Thursday afternoon. The body was removed to the Bates and Evans mortuary at Sonoma.

Through the Air Force here Mrs. Arnold said it was her husband's wish that no flowers be sent for the funeral services. She suggested that anyone wishing to memorialize General Arnold should contribute to the Air Force Aid Society to aid in establishing a scholarship fund.

Retirement as a five-star general June 30, 1946, did not end General Arnold's active efforts to make America strong in the air, a cause to which he had devoted 35 years of an active life. Although he announced at the time that he intended to "sit under an oak tree and look at white-faced cows," he was not long in retirement before he began contributing articles to newspapers and magazines on air power and its potentialities as an instrument of peace.

He climaxed his writing career in September, 1949, with publication of "Global Mission," his own story of 35 years as an Army and Air Force pilot.

Presented Special Commission

When the Air Force was granted autonomy under the Unification Act of 1947, General Arnold still ranked as General of the Armies. President Truman rectified that anomaly by calling him to Washington and presenting him with a special commission, and the only one, as General of the Air Force, duly confirmed by the Senate.

The great Army Air Forces which darkened the skies over Germany and dropped on Japan the first two atomic bombs ever used on military targets was very much the creation of General Arnold and bore the unmistakable imprint of his personality. His enthusiasm, his foresight, his optimism and his dogged perseverance were infectious and the three million officers and men under his command caught them and translated them into action. His crackling voice and incisive manner communicated to his subordinates his aggressive spirit and impatience with needless delay and even managed, somehow, to color his dispatches.

Grew With Air Arm

The Nation's pioneer airman at the time of his retirement, General Arnold had seen the air arm grow from a couple of unpromising box-kites to the great armada the United States possessed at the end of World War II. And he had grown with it, clamoring in his high-pitched voice for recognition of its potentialities, and risking both his neck and his career to impress those potentialities on the American public.

In his final report as Commanding General, Army Air Forces, he looked farther ahead than even most airmen were willing to peer at the time and saw fleet of supersonic guided missiles carrying on a war of robots against which men on the ground would be all but helpless. After his retirement he lost no opportunity to reiterate his conviction that only superior air power, linked to the atomic bomb, would or could forestall Russian aggression at whatever moment Russia chose to move.

Born in Pennsylvania

Henry Harley Arnold was born at Gladwyn, Pa., June 25, 1886, and was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1907. Assigned to the 29th Infantry, he served in the Philippines until 1909, when he was transferred to Governors Island, N. Y. While there he accepted an opportunity for detail to the Signal Corps as an aviator and received instruction from the Wright brothers at Dayton, Ohio, from April to June, 1911, receiving pilot's license No. 29.

Upon completion of the flight course young Lieutenant Arnold was ordered to the recently established Signal Corps Aviation School at College Park, Md., as an instructor. While there, on June 1, 1912, his adventurous spirit led him to establish an altitude record of 6540 feet in a flimsy Model B Wright biplane, a feat which evoked this headline in a Washington newspaper:

"Near Death in Aero. Lieut. Arnold Benumbed by Cold at High Altitude."

Won First MacKay Trophy

In July and August of the same year, Lieut. Arnold took part in maneuvers in New York and Connecticut, where he established several new aeronautical records. Back at College Park, he made a reconnassance flight from the flight school there to Washington Barracks, to Fort Myer and return, which won for him the first MacKay trophy awarded. During the latter part of the same year, he was on duty at Fort Riley, Kans., observing artillery fire and gaining the distinction of sending the first air-to-ground radio message in history.

After nearly a year of duty in the office of the Chief Signal Officer here, Lieutenant Arnold was assigned to the Ninth Infantry in September, 1913, and then to the Thirteenth Infantry in the Philippines. On completion of three years in these assignments he was returned to aviation duty at the new aviation school on North Island near San Diego, Calif.

After duty there and in the Canal Zone, and having been promoted to captain, he was assigned to Washington at the outbreak of World War I as information officer for the Aviation Section Signal Corps. Upon creation of the Office of the Director of Military Aeronautics, Captain Arnold was appointed executive officer and later assistant director with the temporary grades of major and colonel.

Conducts First Air Refueling

After a two-month tour of inspection in France, he returned to the United States and was assigned to duty on the West Coast. In 1920 Captain Arnold was promoted to the permanent rank of major and transferred to the new Air Service. During his tour in the West he experimented with air patrol of forests and conducted the first successful midair refueling operation in this country.

In August, 1924, Major Arnold was assigned as a student to the Army Industrial College here, graduating in 1925. He then became chief of the Information Division, Office of the Chief of Air Service, and shortly became involved in the difficulties which Brig. Gen. William Mitchell had brought to the fore by his outspoken demand for a separate air force. Major Arnold testified for General Mitchell at the court-martial which resulted in Mitchell's reduction to the rank of colonel and subsequent retirement.

In March, 1926, Major Arnold was assigned to command Air Service troops at Marshall Field, Fort Riley, Kans., remaining until 1928, when he was assigned as a student to the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. Upon graduation in June, 1929, he was assigned to command the Fairfield, Ohio, Air Depot, from which post he was transferred in 1931 to command March Field, Riverside, Calif.

Won Second Trophy

While at March Field he was promoted to lientenant colonel and won his second MacKay trophy by leading a flight from Washington to Fairbanks, Alaska, and back. Then, when the General Headquarters Air Force was established in 1935, Colonel Arnold was placed in command of its First Wing at March Field. In 1936 he was named Assistant Chief of the Air Corps and, in 1938, became Chief of the Air Corps upon the death in an aircraft accident of Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover. In that post he was advanced to the temporary rank of major general.

As Chief of Air Corps, General Arnold found himself in charge of things at a time when war in Europe was obviously but a matter of time and when nations which probably would be opposed to Nazi Germany were seeking aircraft in the United States. It was a time, also, when expansion of United States air power was beginning to be seriously considered, and it was General Arnold's task to reconcile, if possible, the demands of friendly European countries with those of his own service. In the midst of these tribulations war in Europe broke, France and the Low Countries were overrun, and America began seriously to set about the business of arming itself.

As far as the Air Corps was concerned, General Arnold directed these efforts with the bouyancy and spirit which had earned at West Point the nickname "Happy." Upon involvement of the United States in the war, these efforts were stepped up and to them was added the burden of conducting active warfare on two fronts and in a score of foreign lands.

In March, 1942, the Army was reorganized and the Air Force gained autonomy with General Arnold in command. In this post he was promoted to general and ultimately to General of the Armies and took his place on the Joint Chiefs of Staff with the heads of other major services. In this capacity he attended the "unconditional surrender" conference at Casablanca and completed a 35,000-mile tour of inspection in North Africa, the Middle East, India and China.

In retirement, General Arnold continued his outspoken crusade for the military strength and air power he felt essential to prevent World War III. In 1948 he warned:

"If we fought Russia the best we could hope to achieve is a moral victory, and that would be small comfort to the remnants of our people crawling amid the burnt-out foundations and charred chimneys of a ruined nation."

Between the writing chores he set for himself, General Arnold found opportunity to indulge his love of hunting, fishing, golf and woodworking. He served for a time as chairman of the California State Game and Fish Commission but was forced by his failing health to resign last year.

Besides his wife, the former Ella Poole of Rochester, N. Y., whom he married September 10, 1913, he is survived by four sons and a daughter. They are Louis E., William, David and Henry H. Arnold, jr., and Lois, who married a naval aviator. Henry H., jr., and William are West Point graduates and served in World War II.

Leaders Join In Tribute to Gen. Arnold

Word of the unexpected death yesterday of Gen. Henry H. Arnold, retired general of the Air Force, brought from military leaders here expressions of personal and national loss.

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson said Arnold was "more than anyone else, responsible for building the great American Air Force.

"He contributed much to the winning of World War II," he said. "He was a great American. We shall all miss him."

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff, said he was "very sad."

"He was my friend and neighbor," Bradley said. "I have admired his broad concept of the Air Force's mission and his far-seeing vision as to the part air power was to play in war."

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff: "My personal sympathy as well as that of all the Air Force is extended to Mrs. Arnold and her family. We in uniform know well how much the world owes to his dynamic and inspired leadership. I feel that I speak for all airmen everywhere when I say the Air Force has lost a great leader and a noble friend."

Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray: "We of the Army mourn the passing of this distinguished soldier, who during his lifetime of service, won the affection of thousands and admiration of the world. The great Air Force we have today is a magnificent monument to his foresight and statesmanship."

Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington: "In wartime, his service in uniform brought the United States Army Air Force to new heights of strategic importance. In peacetime, General Arnold's far-sighted vision continued to be a source of strength and inspiration to the Air Force."

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations: "General Arnold was one of the greatest military leaders of our time. He overcame tremendous obstacles to maintain an Air Force which continues to serve his country in peace as vitally as it did in war."

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army chief of staff: "I am greatly shocked at the death of one of our top leaders of World War II. Hap Arnold combined to a rare degree, the foresight, imagination and leadership necessary to create a great air arm which was vital to our victory. The entire Army joins me in expressing to Mrs. Arnold and family our deepest sympathy."

Secretary of the Navy Matthews: General Arnold's "distinguished service to his country in peace and war earned for him the Nation's gratitude."

most of whom, are employed in steel company-owned (captive) pits, paid no heed to a message from District 4 headquarters being broadcast at half-hour intervals over the Uniontown radio station:

"United Mine Workers of America, President John L. Lewis asks all miners to return to work Monday. Miners to work on a three-day week work basis."

John Busarello, president of UMW Pittsburgh District 5 which employs 28,000 diggers, insisted:

"The majority of miners in District 5 will return Monday. They are going to comply with the request made by International President John L. Lewis."

Busarello declined to name locals which voted not to work.

At Grant Town, W. Va., 31 locals showed a sharp reversal of earlier sentiment and voted in a body Sunday to resume digging this morning. The ovte was 18 locals in favor of working, 13 against majority decisions to carry.

Joe Serdich, president of Grant Town Local 4047, emphasized prior to the balloting that a vote to continue idle would not indicate a revolt against Lewis.

Scores of UMW locals throughout the country held weekend meetings to decide the question: "To work or not to work?" The answer was a resounding no from the first nine locals voting.

As usual, Lewis is maintaining tight-lipped silence on the situation. There is always a chance of a mushrooming walkout which would idle nearly, if not all of the 400,000 soft coal miners.

Walkouts, Stoppages, Strikes

Since the old contract expired, Lewis has called walkouts, work stoppages and just plain strikes so often that the current coal supply above the ground is at its lowest level in years.

In some areas coal is being rationed. Generally speaking, however, household users haven't been affected too much so far.

President Truman has refused to invoke the injunction provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act to get the miners back on a five-day week. He contends there's no emergency.

Annual Wage Guarantee Next Goal, Reuther Says

Brantford, Ontario, Jan. 15 (AP). A guaranteed annual wage will be the next objective by the United Automobile Workers (CIO).

This is the goal after the union achieves its pensions and medical care targets, Walter P. Reuther, international president of the union, told delegates attending a union conference here.

Reuther was the final speaker at the two-day conference. He officially opened the $80,000 headquarters building of Local 458, Brantford. Mayor Howard Winter and members of City Council attended.

Victor G. Reuther, brother of the union president and educational director of the UAW, told workers Saturday that the automobile industry is pricing itself out of the market and depriving working men of job opportunities.

Lower Incomes Seen for Farmers In Bank Report

Richmond, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—Gloomy tinges are being painted into the 1950 agricultural picture for the five-State Fifth Federal Reserve District.

Farmers in the district should expect somewhat lower prices and smaller incomes this year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond said today in its November business report.

Reduced financial returns will be brought about by the fact that acreages of cotton and peanuts, two of the most important cash crops in the district, will be reduced, the bank explained.

According to the bank, changes which appear desirable are more efficient farm management, larger and more productive farms, and expansion of livestock and poultry production.

Present DP Law Is Bar to 130,000, Carusi Declares

By the United Press

Chairman Ugo Carusi of the Displaced Persons Commission yesterday said the present DP law closes U. S. doors to 130,000 refugees—almost all Catholics and Jews—who otherwise would be eligible for admission.

His statement, made in a radio interview, was the first concrete evidence the Administration has offered to back up President Truman's claim that the law is unfair to Catholics and Jews.

The claim has ben hotly disputed by Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), of the Senate Judiciary Commitee, who is opposing an Administration-backed bill to liberalize the present law.

Carusi also disputed McCarran's recent claim that loose administration of the law had permitted a flood of potentially subversive aliens to enter the United States.

Blunder Threatens To Split Iowa GOP

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A blunder at Republican National Headquarters has sent the Iowa GOP spinning into one of its hottest internal rows in years.

The blunder was the failure of the national committee to include Iowa's Governor, William S. Beardsley, among Republicans who were asked to help draft a "statement of Republican principles" for the 1950 race.

An immediate result has been an ultimatum from Beardsley supporters to Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper to repudiate the national leadership.

Guy G. Gabrielson, Republican national chairman, last month called upon "loyal" Republicans from top officials "down to the grass roots" to submit their ideas of what the Republican Party should stand for this year. Many Iowans got Gabrielson's letter. Beardsley was overlooked.

At Outs With Spangler

At the same time Harrison E. Spangler, Iowa national committeeman and former national chairman, was named to the committee to write the platform. Spangler and Beardsley do not see eye to eye. The Spangler group backed Robert Blue last June for renomination for Governor. Beardsley overwhelmed him in an upset as unexpected as President Truman's Iowa victory in November.

In the 1948 general election, Spangler centered on the reelection of George A. Wilson as Senator. Wilson was badly beaten by Senator Guy M. Gillette while Beardsley won handily.

Hickenlooper comes from Spangler's home, Cedar Rapids, and has always had Spangler's blessing.

Signed by Don Berry

The ultimatum to Hickenlooper was signed by Don L. Berry, a newspaper publisher in Beardsley's county, and long a power in Iowa politics.

"Your only chance to be reelected is to make a bold and dramatic stand of cutting loose from Spangler and Gabrielson, running on your own, and telling the national committee to go to Hades," Berry wired.

"Gabrielson's naming of Spangler on the policy committee is just a slap in the face to the people of Iowa and makes Democratic victory in November a cinch."

Berry added that he could suggest a candidate who can win unless Hickenlooper repudiates the national committee. Otherwise, he said, "as things stand now" the State will go Democratic in 1950.

Many Iowans in Washington think the candidate Berry has in mind is Beardsley. Berry told newsmen Beardsley had no hand in sending the message.

Berry's wire came on top of a break between Hickenlooper and Iowa's Pulitzer prize-winning editor, William W. Waymack, recently a member of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Waymack charged Hickenlooper with playing politics in his attack last summer on AEC. He said Hickenlooper, in attacking AEC Chairman David E. Lilienthal, had also hit him as he had always voted with Lilienthal on matters of policy.

Both editors, Waymack and Berry, have wide influence in Iowa. Neither is politically ambitious. Each has been a leader in civic affairs for years. Both formerly supported Hickenlooper.

First GI Policy Refund Checks In Today's Mail

The first checks will be delivered to World War II veterans today in distribution of a $2,800,000,000 insurance refund.

From now on the Veterans' Administration and the Treasury hope to turn out one million checks a week and to get the payments in the hands of 16 million veterans by June 30.

Checks will average about $125, but some will be as low as 90 cents and some as high as $528.

They represent an accumulation of cash from premiums on Government insurance in excess of the amount needed to carry the program.

The first day's checks have gone out to postoffices all over the country in bundles.

As the program grinds on, veterans will be paid generally in the order of the last three digits in their service serial numbers.

Six Slain in Area Fights on Weekend

A wave of violence swept Washington and Alexandria over the weekend and left six dead in its wake.

Four persons died of gunshot wounds, one died after a fist fight and one was fatally burned when he was struck with a kerosene lamp. One of the deaths was in Alexandria.

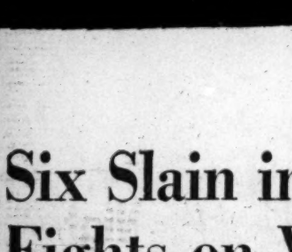
The dead are:

Mrs. Hattie Balden, 28, of 120 R st. ne., who, according to police, was shot to death by her husband.

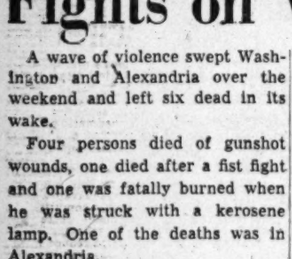
Clyde Balden, 37, the husband, of the same address, who, police said, shot himself after killing his wife.

Leroy Murray, 51, of 632 Morton st. nw., who was injured fatally during a fist fight at the Morton st. address.

Ignacio Butler, 15, of 738 7th st. ne., who was shot in the head



Butler Murray



Underwood Watson

during an argument among teenagers in the 1200 block of Howison pl. sw.

Samuel Watson, 43, of 1525 Bells ct. nw., who was burned fatally when a woman struck him with a lighted kerosene lamp.

Walter Underwood, 25, of 540 N. Royal st., Alexandria, who was found shot to death near the intersection of Oronoco and N. Pitt sts. in Alexandria.

The Baldens

In the deaths of Clyde Balden and his wife, Hattie, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued certificates of murder and suicide.

Police said the shootings occurred at 9:25 p. m. Saturday in a second floor bedroom occupied by the couple at 120 R st. ne.

They learned Mrs. Balden had been out Friday night and wanted to go out again Saturday night. Balden got out a .38-cabiler revolver and shot his wife in the stomach. He then put the gun to his right temple and shot himself through the head.

Both were pronounced dead at the scene by a Gallinger Hospital staff doctor.

Leroy Murray

The fight at 632 Morton st. nw., in which Leroy Murray was fatally injured, took place shortly after 10 p. m. Saturday, according to police.

They reported the fight was between Murray and Russell Ross, 27, who had lived at the Morton st. address with his wife until recently.

During the fight, Murray was struck in the mouth and fell to the floor, police said. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Freedmen's Hospital.

Dr. MacDonald said that Murray apparently died of a fractured skull but that he will perform an autopsy this morning to fix the cause of death.

Ross left after the fight but appeared voluntarily yesterday morning at the Fourth Precinct and surrendered. He was jailed on the technical charge of "held for action of the coroner." He will appear at a coroner's inquest at the morgue today at 12:30 p. m.

According to police, Ross had separated recently from his wife and she had remained at the Morton st. address. The fight resulted, police said, when Ross appeared at the home of his estranged wife and found Murray living there.

Ignacio Butler

The shooting of 15-year-old Ignacio Butler shortly before 11 p. m. Saturday in the 1200 block of Howison pl. sw., resulted in the arrest on a murder charge of Robert Henry, 19, a labor, who gave police his address as 1129 Vermont ave. nw.

Shot through the head, the boy was pronounced dead on arrival at Providence Hospital.

Police said they learned there had been a party for ten-agers at a home in the 1200 block of Howison pl., that the party got disorderly and all of the teen-agers were ordered out of the house.

Outside, in the street, according to police, the argument that had begun inside continued. The Butler boy was shot.

After his arrest, it was reported, Henry admitted firing the fatal shot, but insisted it was in self-defense. He was held without bond for his appearance at 11:30 a. m. today at an inquest.

Samuel Watson

In the case of the fatal burns suffered by Samuel Watson, police said they were inflicted shortly before 10 p. m. Saturday during an altercation at a party in the home of a neighbor, Miss Sarah Keyes at 1532 Bells ct. nw.

Police did not ascertain the nature of the argument but did learn that Miss Keyes struck Watson over the head with a lighted kerosene lamp.

Watson ran from the house with his clothing ablaze and collapsed in in front of the house. He was taken to Emergency Hospital where he died at 8 a. m. yesterday, Dr. MacDonald said of burns to his entire body.

Miss Keyes received slight burns about her arms when some of the flaming oil splatered on her. She was treated at Georgetown University Hospital after which she was arrested and taken to the Women's Bureau for detention. She will appear at a coroner's inquest at noon today.

Walter Underwood

In the Alexandria shooting of 25-year-old Walter Underwood, police had made no arrests last night.

After receiving a call reporting the shooting, they found Underwood near Oronoco and N. Pitt sts., dying of a gunshot wound in the left side. He was taken to Alexandria Hospital but was pronounced dead on arrival there at 12:15 a. m.

Police found a trail of blood leading from a house at 518 Oronoco st. to the spot where Underwood was found.

They discovered that Underwood had visited briefly at the house where a party was in progress but guests at the party were uncertain how long Underwood was there or what time he left.

Dozen Questioned

Yesterday about a dozen persons were questioned including Mr. and Mrs. Sam Reese who live at the Oronoco st. address and were hosts at the party.

Police believe Underwood was attacked with a knife before he was shot because the index finger of his right hand was cut.

The shooting was reported by Earl Edwards, 19, of 410 S. Columbus st., who said he saw a group of men running near the intersection of Oronoco and N. Pitt sts. and then heard several shots.

He said he went to the corner to investigate and found the wounded man there.

Delays in Medical Center Don't Discourage Backers

Despite an 18-month delay in starting construction of the proposed 35-million-dollar Washington Medical Center, its backers will not seek another site.

"We'd rather settle with a certainty than fiddle-faddle around with uncertainties," declared Frederick Bradley, Washington attorney and treasurer of the center's board of directors.

He spoke concerning President Truman's budget report to Congress, which stated that start of the medical center on Naval Observatory grounds cannot be expected before July 1, 1951. Last year, the center planners inspected other Washington sites, including Gallaudet College, as possible alternatives.

Bradley said the prime factor in decision to await transfer of the observatory concerns taxation revenues for the District.

"We don't want to take any more taxable ground away from the District," he declared. "This way, if we wait for the observatory site we eventually add the grounds of Episcopal, Emergency and Garfield Hospitals to land which can be taxed by the District."

Under the Washington Medical Center plans the three hospitals would vacate their present properties to consolidate their facilities for the center.

The President's budget message pointed out that complete cost of the center is limited to $35,000,000, of which $2,200,000 cash and $19,500,000 in contract authority has already been authorizd by Congress.

Completion of tentative and diagrammatic sketches of the new center can be expected by this summer; working drawings will be 72 percent complete by June 30, 1951, and entirely complete by the fall of 1951, according to the President's report.

Old-Age Insurance

This week the Senate Finance Committee opens hearings on a bill already passed by the House broadening the coverage and increasing the benefits of the Federal old-age and survivors' insurance system. It is a move of the greatest importance. The Senate is virtually certain to approve liberalization of the present system, although it will, no doubt, make some changes in the House bill. In subsequent editorials The Washington Post will discuss the merits of specific provisions of the House bill. Before undertaking a more detailed examination of this kind, however, it is well to note the glaring defects of the present Federal old-age insurance system that call for legislative action.

The chief purpose of the system is to protect retired workers from dependence on charity when they are no longer able to work. Under the existing contributory system, with both contributions and benefits directly related to the worker's earnings, benefits are payable as a matter of right and the worker's self-respect and independence are preserved, provided his pension is large enough to prevent him from becoming a recipient of charity. Unfortunately, the purpose of the program has been defeated because of the low scale of benefits. Monthly insurance payments, for instance, average only $26, and the maximum primary insurance benefit is only $45. These payments would be inadequate, even if living costs were at the level of 10 years ago; they are absurdly small for this age of high living costs.

Contrast this scale of pensions with old-age relief payments, which average $44 per month for the Nation as a whole and in some States average about $50, $60 or $70! Moreover, average payments under old-age assistance programs have more than doubled during the past decade, while insurance payments have remained stationary. In several States more than half the aged population are now on relief. In Louisiana, indeed, 83 percent of those over 65 are receiving assistance. This rapid expansion of the old-age assistance program is chiefly due to the failure to revise the scale of insurance payments and extend the insurance system to millions of workers still uncovered.

As the Committee on Ways and Means says, "if the insurance system is not strengthened and expanded, the old-age assistance program may develop into a very costly and ill-advised system of pensions payable not only to the needy but to all individuals at or above retirement age who are no longer employed." The possibility is not remote; it is imminent. The one effective means of combating this dangerous trend is to make the old-age insurance system universally applicable, raise insurance payments substantially, and discourage expansion of State-assistance programs by gradually reducing, perhaps eventually eliminating, Federal grants to the States for old-age assistance.

Diagnostic Clinic

New York is trying an interesting experiment as a result of a recent hospital study. For a long time public health authorities have recognized the value of having expert diagnostic centers in connection with hospital service. It has been found in many instances that correct diagnosis of cases eliminates the need for hospitalization and thus substantially reduces the cost of hospital service at public expense. Consequently, diagnostic clinics have been established in many cities for the benefit of needy patients. The novelty about the clinic opened at New York Hospital this week is that it will take "ambulatory patients" of all income levels. Apparently the diagnostic service is to be rendered to pay patients at cost. The George Washington Hospital here is operating its diagnostic clinic on a somewhat similar basis, but it takes only cases in which cancer is suspected.

There will be no treatment of patients at the New York clinic. But doctors who do not have all the facilities of a modern clinic will be able to send difficult cases to the diagnostic center. And private individuals who have no doctor will be able to take advantage of this service on their own initiative. Treatment can then be obtained from private physicians. If the fees are kept within the means of the rank and file, the diagnostic clinic is likely to be swamped with ailing persons. It remains to be seen whether this type of service can be provided for the general public at reasonable costs. Modern diagnosis with the aid of X-ray pictures, electrocardiograms, laboratory tests and consultation with specialists is a very expensive process. But it seems to be an essential preliminary to any adequate treatment of human ills, and our medical service will never be wholly satisfactory until this type of diagnosis is available to every sick person. For this reason the New York service will be watched with a great deal of interest and may be widely copied if it is successful.

Thuggery In Peking

Seizure of the American consular offices in Peking may be, as Assistant Secretary of State Butterworth says, without precedent. But there is plenty of history back of it. And nothing can be understood in pyrotechnic China without knowing that history. The high-handed act is explicable on two grounds: China's pathological antiforeignism and Russia's notion of sweet revenge. The elephantine memory of both Chinese and Russians is at least one thing they have in common.

Chinese antiforeignism is focused upon the so-called "unequal treaties." One of them, according to the Chinese, is the 1901 protocol ending the Boxer Rebellion. Under this settlement a Legation Quarter, almost as big as Georgetown, was earmarked in Peking by the foreign powers, and run by the Ministers acting as a local council. That is to say, extraterritoriality prevailed. However, though the quarter is still there, control has been returned to the Chinese. In 1943 the United States, for instance, resigned in treaty form all the exclusive rights hitherto enjoyed under the Boxer Protocol, and extraterritoriality was abandoned. In return China and America agreed in the same treaty that the land on which United States property was located should be kept. This property included a barracks which in the days of extraterritoriality used to be the quarters of a body of American Marines. The barracks were connected with the consular offices which have now been seized.

In view of this retrocession, solemnly entered into by treaty, how account for the present lawlessness? China's grievance had been removed, a free and equal treaty had taken the place of the "unequal treaty." Let us hazard the view that in the Communist mind no treaty entered into with the Chiang Kai-shek government could possibly have been equal; he is the "running dog" of American imperialism. Moreover, the symbol of the Legation Quarter remains—useful for the purpose of showing off a coup to the propaganda-crazed Chinese. Doubtless this brutal violation of the 1943 treaty will be reported in China as the capture of an imperialist position. Perhaps, for all we know, the 1943 treaty has joined the Boxer Protocol among the unequal treaties. That would not be surprising, for the Chinese, who used to celebrate "days of humiliation," are now suffering from a sort of inverted humiliation, or what the psychologists would call "compensation," and this disease can take strange forms.

The Russian advisers in Peking had reasons of their own in egging on the Chinese to seize the consular offices. Within a stone's throw of the consulate stands the old Russian Embassy. In the old days the embassy had a barracks, too. They were raided, though not seized, by the then Peking government in 1927. Papers were confiscated, Chinese Communists arrested, and the whole action was cheered, if not encouraged, by the foreign powers. It was known that the embassy was the center of plots and subversion against the existing regime. So the Chinese got into the Legation Quarter on a warrant issued by the Diplomatic Corps. Moscow evidently stored up this "face-losing" incident for a future reckoning. It felt misused not only by the Chinese, whom Moscow denounced for this "unprecedented breach of elementary principles of international law," but mostly by the foreign powers in Peking, particularly the United States.

The United States is countering the Chinese act by a withdrawal of its officials from all China. This is a prudent decision. Some day the Chinese will recover from their present case of abnormal psychology, and wake up to the fact that, in their favorite phrase, they have become the "running dogs" of a Muscovite imperialism—one that has been eating into China's borderlands since the theft of the Amar region in the seventeenth century. Our propaganda ought to be rubbing this in. It ought to be telling the Chinese people, by every means in our power, what the only really unequal treaty is. It is the 1945 treaty with Russia under which Manchuria has been filched again. This is the treaty, executed by Chiang Kai-shek, that Mao Tze-tung now seems to be validating and even extending in Moscow.

A reaction against Russian imperialism occurred in 1927. Chiang Kai-shek, the Mao Tze-tung of the moment, let in the Russians, but, on realizing what they were up to, threw them out. History has not stopped repeating itself in China, and statesmanship must keep that in mind, no matter how the hotheads bark.

Mr. Malik's Antics

The United Nations Security Council might well give Jacob A. Malik, the Soviet representative, a vote of thanks for taking it off the hot seat. The Council has been operating under the presidency of Dr. T. F. Tsiang, the Chinese Nationalist representative. Since Dr. Tsiang no longer represents any country or any government worthy of the name, his continuance as head of the Council obviously created a rather farcical situation. The attention of the world might have been pointedly focused on this anomaly, except for the fact that Dr. Malik has diverted the spotlight to his own antics.

Dr. Malik has been flitting in and out of the Council with the petulance of an amateur demagogue. On Tuesday he walked out in a state of high dudgeon; on Thursday and Friday he was back again only to walk out again after his proposal to oust Dr. Tsiang had been defeated. His last walkout was accompanied by the childish assertion that the Soviet Union would not recognize any action taken by the Council under Dr. Tsiang and that Russia would refrain from further participation. The question thus raised is really one of orderly procedure. There can be no action on China, as we noted the other day, until Communist China presents its credentials. By trying to force a premature decision and then reacting like an adolescent when his gestures are defeated, the Soviet representative has centered far more attention upon his own foolishness than upon the Council's embarrassment.

Back To The Graveyard

Almost the last word spoken in the House of Representatives last year was a well-merited eulogy of Congressman Eberharter for having sponsored the notable reform which had enabled the House to function as a legislative body free from dictation. With the aid of a memorandum prepared by the Legislative Reference Service, Congressman Holifield pointed out that the curb Mr. Eberharter had designed for the Rules Committee had saved four bills, possibly five, from the committee's legislative graveyard. In the case of the anti-poll tax and rivers and harbors bills the sponsoring committee chairmen had gone to the floor after being denied a rule and induced the House to take the measures from the Rules Committee and pass them. The threat of using the new rule forced the balky Rules Committee into action on the slum clearance and minimum-wage bills and probably on the vitally important social security bill.

In spite of this clear-cut demonstration that the new 21-day rule is essential to prevent minority dictation in the House, the Rules Committee has voted 9 to 2 for restoration of its former arbitrary powers. It is not satisfied to serve the House as "traffic director," with limited powers to delay bills approved by the legislative committees. It seeks to regain the power of erecting impassable road-blocks against any bill that its members do not like. That is a power which, of course, should not be entrusted to any lesser body than the House itself.

The argument always made for a dictatorial Rules Committee is that it is needed to save the House from passing unwise legislation. Such an argument carries a strong appeal. Many citizens will agree with the Rules Committee, for example, that the rivers and harbors bill taken out of its hands last year was a pork-barrel measure and that the anti-poll tax bill, which it tried to defeat, is unconstitutional. This newspaper is unalterably opposed to pork-barrel and unconstitutional bills, but we do not believe that it is safe to entrust 12 Congressmen with the power to say what measures approved by regular legislative committees are too unwise to be submitted to the House for a vote. That is not representative government but oligarchy.

There are other methods of preventing the House from stampeding for unsound vote-getting measures. For many years the House has been urged to set up an effective majority policy committee which, in consultation with the President and a similar committee in the Senate, would shape a legislative program each year and then make every effort to hold members of the majority party to that program. It is unquestionably true that strong leadership is needed in an unwieldy body such as the House. But let it be leadership through the formulation of party programs and use of the caucus to keep members in line with those programs if necessary. The responsibility for what the House does should rest squarely upon the party in control of it, and that party, of course, is answerable to the people. If it indulges in a spending debauch, the voters will know what to do about it.

But for the House to slip back into the undemocratic practice of blocking issues that a little handful of its members deems too hot to handle would be a tragic retrogression. Instead of authorizing the Rules Committee to squat athwart the legislative highway once more, we think the House ought to rebuke its rule makers for not maintaining a smooth and orderly flow of bills to the floor.

Throw It Out

Now that Capital Transit has made its request for higher fares, there is no excuse for continuing to irritate a segment of the public with transit radio. This is a time when Capital Transit needs every friend it can get. An understanding of the financial dilemma the company faces is vital to the continuance of adequate public transportation in Washington. Yet the company cannot expect to win converts to its position when it irritates patrons with traveling juke boxes and commercials to which they must listen.

There could be no valid protest if Capital Transit gave the transit radio operators time to liquidate their investment. What does not make sense is for the company to be installing a great many more radios which, although they are tolerated by some riders, are highly offensive to others. The company ought to take a cue from the New York Central Railroad, which abandoned forced listening in Grand Central Terminal because even a minority of patrons had expressed their disapproval. Item No. 1 in gaining more public good will is for Capital Transit to realize that the sometimes soft and sometimes grating strains of transit radio create a good deal more discord than harmony.

"Doctor's Dilemma"

It appears that Lucile D. Sisson (letter published January 11) has missed the point of your January 5 editorial, "Doctor's Dilemma." She interpreted your refusal to join the hue and cry of first-degree murder against Dr. Hermann N. Sander as implied approval of legalized euthanasia.

Most thinking doctors will agree that legalizing mercy deaths for hopeless incurables in dying agony is a dangerous business. Hitler proved its end was genocide. But can we call Dr. Sander's delerium of spiritual defeat and despair first-degree murder?

The student of abstract justice should be the first to deny the identity of Dr. Sander's unbalanced concept of mercy and first-degree murder. The true moralist always distinguishes between motives of undeniable malice and mistaken good. This is but sensible recognition of the things which are Caesar's and the things which are God's. Juries only are concerned with Caesar's domain. When the well-intentioned try to make them act as theologians there is apt to be more human mercy and common sense than abstract justice.

Economic Aid To Asia

It is important that, in our normal and natural desire for Government economy, we should not be led by isolationist sentiment into slashing severely expenditures for economic aid abroad. Economic aid under the Marshall Plan has been extremely valuable in rolling back the tide of Russian Communist aggression in Europe.

Instead of reducing severely our economic aid to Europe, we should supplement such aid by economic aid to Asia. Since the corrupt and reactionary character of the Chinese government made China an easy prey to communism, it is all the more necessary for us to give aid to the new national governments in the Philippines, Burma, India, Pakistan and the Indonesian Republic, to make sure that they, too, do not fall under Communist domination.

Such expenditures would be investments in friendship by raising the standard of living. They would be investments in peace, for they would reduce Communist influence. And they would help our economy and employment by increasing our exports.

"On Greatness"

May I be permitted a double epistolary comment on Alfred Friendly's excellent article on the progress of science and your January 1 editorial, "On Greatness"?

There is, or should be, little disagreement with Mr. Friendly's summations. Only, it ought to be pointed out that Einstein is not exactly in a minority among scientists in his belief that we can know the nature of matter. Schroedinger, a Nobelist, in his What Is Life, believes that he knows something about nature and has suggested a unitary field theory for quanta and electromagnetic phenomena, though he admits he might be wrong. The Haldane-Milne hypothesis concerning the earth's origins is another excellent revolutionary assumption.

Ehrenhafts' theory that magnetism flows in the same direction as electricity is another. Einstein's colleague, Oppenheimer, as early as 1930, challenged the "anti-electron of Dirac (Milne's coworker), called Dirac's attention to the special difficulties and has now indorsed the Bohr principle of complementarity, which is about the nature of the world. There are many others who operate on the principles of structure and order.

Your editorialist certainly was wise in not getting on the philosophy-of-history limb. But he did have his historical cake, and ate it too, concerning whether it is men who shape events or events that shape men. Perhaps it is a truism to say that great men could not be so unless the society which produced them made them great. The biological fact is that some men are better endowed and do seize upon historical realities in order to change their societies.

Moreover, the accidentalist theory of history—the classic hoary one being about the failure of the signaler at the Dardanelles, and thus the Russian revolution—ought to go by the historical board. If your editorialist assumes, as in one place he seemed to be doing, that the Russian revolution was a result of an amalgam of social forces, then history can be made an objective affair; and no longer subjunctive, particularized or capricious.

Rail Abandonments

It is interesting to note in your January 11 editorial on the abandonment of passenger service on the Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad, that you comment solely on the nostalgic angle of this typical situation that is happening elsewhere in the country.

Everyone cried the blues during the war that the gasoline shortage was terrible. Since the next war will undoubtedly use twice as much gasoline, one can picture the situation, especially since the rails have gone over to diesels, although I suspect that the conversion to diesels is an indirect move on the part of big business to "get around" the miners of coal. Our scientists tell us of the unlimited supply of coal; yet we are converting our rails to buses, as in the case of B. & A., and of course we are dieseling.

The price is going to be very high when the next catastrophe breaks, because not only will ordinary transportation cease, but the problem of evacuation of highly populated areas will be impossible because our transportation system will have been undermined. By that time, most of the steam (coal-operated) engines will be scrapped.

So, in the long run, that nostalgic feeling will be replaced by a feeling of nausea, when the situation unfolds itself.

Standards For Loyalty Boards

In a news article in your January 9 issue, it is reported that Mr. Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the President's Loyalty Review Board, recommends the continuation on a permanent basis of the loyalty program as administered by this board. He states that the existence of the loyalty program acts as a deterrent to "unfit persons" who might otherwise seek Federal jobs. It is estimated that it will be necessary to continue to investigate some 500,000 persons annually as replacements in the heavy Federal employment turnover.

In spite of this indication that the necessity to screen applicants for Federal employment to determine their "loyalty" has now become a permanent feature of our Government, there has not been sufficient public discussion of the problems involved.

Not many people are aware, for example, that the function of the loyalty boards is delimited not to questions of "security," but to those of "loyalty." We certainly need to know the difference between these two. Even more important, public servants and American citizens must have guidance, on general principles, concerning the requirements of loyalty to their country.

A "clear, simplified, workable definition of loyalty" has to date not been made available for public consideration, except to the extent that evreyone knows that it is incompatible with "communism," another term requiring definition. It seems elementary that the loyalty program will not deter the presence in the Government of "unfit persons" when the very standards of fitness or unfitness are not spelled out in clear terms.

A clear definition of "loyalty" can greatly assist the various loyalty boards, who are confronted with a delicate practical problem, rather than with a metaphysical one, and to the investigative agencies, particularly the FBI. The latter have business only with "facts," but they cannot distinguish fact from fiction without standards of evaluation. Obviously, any particular "loyalty" case cannot wait upon scholastic definitions, but a permanent loyalty program cannot entirely disregard them.

It is not true that the lack of precision of the concept of "loyalty" renders it meaningless. In many cases it may only be necessary to "recognize the elephant even though you can't define it." But there are other cases where it is not enough to observe that "it walks and quacks like a duck" when it is mallards or wild ducks we are after.

We are told that the loyalty program cannot be strictly bound by judicial processes, and perhaps judicial process is administratively unfeasible. The character of the administrators must therefore count so much the more; but in addition, general principles must be clear, even though their application requires discretion. We are fortunate, judging from the best reports, in that the Loyalty Review Board "leans over backward to protect rights of the individuals as well as those of the Government" and most assiduously "has sought to avoid a 'witch-hunt' atmosphere or injustice to employes." This follows from the high caliber and fine sense of responsibility of the board's members, but even they are handicapped without generally known guiding principles.

Reasonable grounds exist for believing that the discriminating and understanding attitude displayed at the highest level has not percolated down to all the lower boards and the investigative agencies where it is most needed. Not so much definition as education in the meaning of loyalty is required not only for the civil service but also for the whole American people.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Gad, They'd Better

The obvious (and known) intent of Secretary of State Acheson's speech on Asiatic policy was to prepare for the ultimate recognition of the Chinese Communist government. Perhaps the best way to approach this thorny problem is through an old story. The story is repeated here in certain quarters, where knowledge of our past follies in China does not obstruct a realistic view of the present situation.

In brief, Boston's celebrated female transcendentalist, Margaret Fuller, once announced, in a moment of enthusiasm, that she "accepted the universe." Miss Fuller's acceptance of the universe was subsequently reported to Thomas Carlyle, who remarked dourly:

"Gad, she'd better."

THE BRITISH were somewhat overhasty in recognizing the Mao Tse-tung regime, and were therefore treated with disdain. The harassment of our Chinese consulates is an obvious response to our failure to follow the British in recognizing. Probably it is also a response to Secretary Acheson's hints about Chinese Titoism, and is intended to show the Kremlin that the new Chinese government is dependably loyal.

It is even possible that Mao Tse-tung has promised Stalin to have no relations with us whatever. Obviously, it is wise for the present to recall the American consular staffs from China. Obviously also the American decision on China must be delayed until the position is clarified and circumstances are favorable. If such a time comes, however, the new Chinese government should be recognized by us for what it is—the established government of China—without any implication of appeasement or approbation.

Recent events, moreover, have vastly strengthened the practical arguments for opening relations with the Chinese Communist government. Behind Acheson's hints about Titoism in China, there is solid intelligence which the Secretary did not disclose.

On the one hand, it is probable that Mao Tse-tung's visit to Moscow constitutes one of the great dramas in the whole history of the Communist Party. The Chinese have a much more specific complaint against the Russians than Acheson indicated.

At the close of the war, Moscow sought to gain sure control of Manchuria, by sending out Mao Tse-tung's old and bitter enemy, Li Li-san, to direct affairs there. Li Li-san, who had been in refuge from Mao Tse-tung in Moscow since the '30s, for a time was a sort of Viceroy of Manchuria. But with Chinese smoothness, Li Li-san has now been replaced by another viceroy loyal to Mao Tse-tung. Despite this, the Russians have continued the system of taking all Manchuria's grain production, in return for machinery which is never delivered.

At Moscow, the Kremlin is reported to be pressing Mao Tse-tung for acceptance of a standard satellite status, on the Polish or Romanian model. Mao Tse-tung, in turn, is reported to be pressing for return of the industrial booty stolen by the Russians from Manchuria; for reestablishment of Chinese control of the chief Manchurian cities; and for permission to direct China's affairs as local necessities dictate. The divergence is very wide.

FURTHERMORE, although the Soviets are in military control of Manchuria, the Chinese Communist Party still retains military control of China proper. And the party apparatus has not as yet been seriously penetrated by the MVD. In short, in some degree, and relative at least to the affairs of China proper, Mao Tse-tung is able to speak as an equal to the masters of the Kremlin. To these reports of the Kremlin conversations, one must add the even more solid evidence of what has now happened in Japan. Sanzo Nosaka, the real power in the Japanese Communist Party, spent the years from the mid-30's onward with Mao Tse-tung, whose close friend he is. When the war ended, he was sent to Japan to reestablish the apparatus of the Japanese Communist Party and to transmit to the JPC the Kremlin line of that period. Evidently he established an apparatus personally dominated by himself. He has now been publicly denounced by the Cominform.

The Japanese Communist Party, in reply to this denunciation, has acknowledged past errors. But the Japanese Communists have neither agreed to change their present line, which was what the Cominform was attacking, nor promised to hurl Nosaka into outer darkness. Here is Titoism in Japan, led by one of Mao Tse-tung's intimates. Add the two groups of facts together. The importance of retaining the power of maneuver in China can hardly be denied, even although it must be admitted that the odds against real Chinese Titoism are still heavy. But the realities of the present and the future must not be judged in the distorting light of the follies of the past.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Dust Has Settled

LAST WEEK, with the whole world listening to him, Mr. Acheson was put to as hard a test as any Secretary of State in our time has had to meet. He had to redefine the position of the United States in relation to the enormous revolution in Asia—to the revolution which is marked by the rise of the Soviets, the fall of Japan, the collapse of the Kuomintang, the liquidation of the British, Dutch and French empires, and the appearance of India, Pakistan and Indonesia as new independent powers.

Lippmann

He was beset by demands for a "policy," which in the minds of many would not have been recognized as a policy unless it was a program of actions to be taken at once by the use of military forces, money, and ringing declarations. Mr. Acheson made no attempt to satisfy these demands. Instead he undertook the less popular but far more responsible and necessary task of reexamining, revising, and reorienting the American attitude to the greatest revolutionary developments which have occurred in Asia for many centuries.

HE MADE IT quite clear that he and his advisers have not been sitting around helplessly and aimlessly during the past six months waiting for something to turn up while the dust of Chiang's collapse was settling. Mr. Acheson and his advisers have been thinking. Now we can see in broad outline the working hypotheses to which their thinking has led them.

THEY HAVE recognized that Stalinist communism is primarily a new instrument of the old Russian imperialism. This is not the view of many anti-Communists, including certain of the State Department experts. These anti-Communists have insisted, largely as a result, I believe, of being taken in by Cominform propaganda, that the great Russian imperial state was the faithful servant of international communism. That, too, is what the innocent fellow travelers all believe. But the truth, as Tito has found out, as Mao will find out, is that the Cominform tail does not wag the Russian bear. Quite the contrary. The pattern of Soviet policy in Germany, in the Danube valley, in the Balkans, in Turkey and Iran, in Manchuria, in Outer and Inner Mongolia, in China and Japan, is not to be found in the writings of Karl Marx or in the declarations of the Third International. The pattern is to be found in the archives of the Russian Foreign Office which Stalin, after the death of Lenin and the defeat of Trotsky, took over as the successor to the czars.

Mr. Acheson's clarification of this cardinal point, hitherto so badly confused by the strategists of the cold war—is an essential preliminary to any policy. It enabled him to put his finger directly on the main premise of a Chinese policy: that the Russian imperial interest in Manchuria and in Mongolia and Sinkiang is in conflict with the vital interests of China. If Mao surrenders the Chinese provinces to Stalin, he must betray the revolution which he has led to victory. If Stalin yields to Mao and retires from these provinces, then the new Chinese republic, though it calls itself Communist, is like Tito's—an independent state and a rival and competitor of Moscow.

MR. ACHESON'S recognition of this conflict, his insistence that the crucial area is not in Formosa or in Hainan but in the long disputed Chinese-Russian borderland, is a China policy. His speech at the National Press Club calling attention to this conflict between Red China and Russia, coupled with his refusal to obscure the conflict by provoking an American conflict with Red China, was in itself an action of great moment throughout Asia. Mr. Acheson was not merely talking on Thursday to the press and to Senators Knowland, Smith and Taft. He was acting to Asia.

The event will show that he was acting with great sagacity and deep penetration. He has isolated the Soviet Union as the only power which is seeking territorial aggrandizement in Asia.

In the course of time this is bound to reestablish an American influence in China. No other position he could have taken could have done that when American influence had sunk to an all-time low as we went down to defeat entangled with Chiang and his carpetbaggers. Had Mr. Acheson yielded on Formosa, using American military power to take control of Chinese territory, he would have remained entangled with Chiang, and he would have obscured the grandiose imperialism of Russia by a snoddy act of American imperialism. The new leaders of Asia would have continued to believe that all great powers are imperial powers, and that as between them it is six of one and a half a dozen of the other.

THE ACHESON policy, resting as it does on an estimate of the historical forces at work in Asia, will have to be understood in a longer perspective than tomorrow's headlines. We must not wait tensely for news that Mao has defied Stalin, and is hurrying back to Peking to denounce Russian imperialism and the Cominform next week, next month, or next year.

For the mills of the gods grind slowly, especially in Asia.

Probe Urged of Company Deals With Communist-Led Unions

on an IUE request for a consent election February 10 among GE workers.

Carey told the Congressmen that "certain sections of management, particularly the General Electric Co.," have helped put obstacles in the way of peaceful settlement of the representation issue.

He said it was "important" for Congress to be concerned about the containment of Soviet expansion overseas, but he added:

"We also believe Congress could wisely turn its eyes homeward toward the even greater danger constituted by opportunistic management collaborating with the Communists.

He said it is the "clear and immediate duty of Congress to investigate these charges" and to learn whether "management's patronage of Communist-controlled unions is dictated in any way by advantageous contracts the companies may hold with Amtorg, the Soviet trade agency."

The struggle between the two unions, Carey said, "concretely reflects" the international cold war in which the world is threatened by "a new totalitarian wave."

GE Spokesman Denies Collusive Dealings

Lemuel R. Boulware, vice president of General Electric, denied in a statement last night that the company had any unwarranted dealings with any unions or Amtorg, Soviet trade organization.

The statement said in part:

"The General Electric Co. has had no dealings for the last three years with Amtorg and only then . . . under proper supervision of the State Department. Any shipments were, of course, stopped when the State Department indicated it so desired.

"As to . . . claims of collusion, both unions are equally vocal in charging each other with being a company union and charging the company with being in collusion with it.

"We have been maintaining a position of strict legal and moral neutrality but have, meanwhile, been insisting that there be . . . elections to give our employes the opportunity to express their choice in this dispute."

Saltonstall said he favors spending whatever is necessary for national security, both in terms of foreign aid and cold war defense outlays, and in domestic programs such as social security. Taft Says Deficit Budget Will Send Prices Soaring

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) last night predicted that prices will start "going up fast" if Congress accepts President Truman's budget providing for a five-billion-dollar Federal deficit in fiscal 1951.

He warned of a new inflationary spiral in a radio debate with Senators Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.), Russell Long (D., La.) and Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.).

Humphrey asserted the Nation's economic outlook is bright and will continue to improve if Mr. Truman's program is enacted. He said it would be a "shock" to the economy if Congress tried to pare down spending drastically to balance the budget this year.

Long pointed out that more than three billion dollars of the President's $42,400,000,000 fiscal 1951 budget represents Federal loans for home purchases, crop support and other purposes. Since most of these loans will be repaid eventually, he said, the deficit "actually" is only about two billion dollars.

send and others said, through the New York Daily Worker's line of "you won't have us, but we'll still be with you."

The delegates packed All Souls' Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., last night to hear speeches by Senators Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) and Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), both proponents of Civil Rights legislation.

Before the meeting, about a dozen young people outside the church distributed—free—copies of the "Southern Edition" of the Daily Wroker with a page 1 reference to the meeting. Police watching the activity said there were no demonstrations.

Both Morse and Humphrey attacked the Wherry resolution, calling for 64 votes to limit debate in the Senate before a filibuster can be stopped.

Humphrey called it "this sell-out of human rights." Morse called it a "backward march through the decades," and cautioned that healthy civil rights legislation will never be passed until the Wherry resolution is removed.

One alternative to nonpassage of civil rights, said Humphrey, "is an old, true, tried and tested alternative; namely, a free election. The time for political politeness is over."

Humphrey said that despite public demand for the President's program, "a minority in the Senate of the United States withstands the national tide. They will fail," he warned, "because history is against them, the people are against them, the President . . . is against them, the times are against them."

At the evening meeting, Roy Wilkins, acting secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Mobilization chairman, also assailed Congress' action on civil rights.

In an afternoon session Paul Sifton, legislative representative of the UAW-CIO, told delegates to obtain positive statements from their Congressmen.

"Don't let them tell you that they're for the principle of FEPC," Sifton declared. "Make them tell you how they'll vote.

The organization, described by members as "liberal in the Americans for Democratic Action sense," also backs home rule and national representation for the District.

On its schedule today are meetings with Congressmen, work sessions in the Interdepartmental Auditorium, 14th st. and Constitution ave. nw., and speeches

D. C. Should Lead World In Civil Rights—Hoffman

Senator Humphrey, departing from his prepared speech at the National Emergency Civil Rights Mobilization last night, called for the lifting of the "iron curtain" of civil rights in Washington.

"We should have in this city home-rule. We should extend the rights to Washington that other people throughout the Nation enjoy," he said.

"The District should have an FEPC bill. This city should be without any slums and it should have the finest schools in the land.

"This is the capital of the Nation—of the world. It should lead all others."

NCAA Rebels Still in Doghouse; Reprisals Hinted

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

WELL, THAT was a brief career as a wrestling referee for Don Newcombe, the Dodgers' big pitcher who was voted the National League's Rookie of the Year at the end of the 1949 season. One week after he made his debut as the third man in the ring for Toot Mondt's wrestling troupe, Pitcher Newcombe calls it quits.

It wasn't his own idea. Branch Rickey, who runs the Dodgers and reads the newspapers even in the wintertime, swooned somewhat at perceiving a picture of his man, Newcombe, entwined in the grips of a pair of obstreperous rasslers, and yelled for the club secretary. Down the chain of command went the order to Newcombe to get out of the rassling business.

POVICH

Naturaly, Rickey will compensate the pitcher for any loss of revenue when they talk about his 1950 contract. Or will he? There has always been some doubt that Rickey is a man of boundless generosity in the payroll department.

The latest evidence of Rickey's parsimony was in the case of Irv Noren, the outfielder Washington bought for $70,000 from Hollywood, one of Rickey's farm clubs. Noren had moved up to Hollywood after being voted the most valuable player in the Texas League. When he graduated to the Nats as the most valuable player in the Coast League, he was still drawing only $450 a month, less than Washington was paying some of its Chattanooga farmhands who had never been voted the most valuable anything.

WHEN THE LAST season ended, Newcombe was the best pitcher on the Brooklyn staff, with 14 wins and five defeats after joining the club in mid-June. He was drawing the minimum salary of $5000. On that score, Rickey's rookies are the most unspoiled men in the majors. In the year of Jackie Robinson's debut when he, too, was voted the No. 1 rookie in the league, he drew only $5000.

Due note was taken of Rickey's snug tactics a couple of years ago at the New York Baseball Writers' minstrel show when one of the skits depicted a couple of end men impersonating Rickey and Dixie Walker in a salary discussion. Walker was demanding a raise, and pointing out that "the club made a lot of money last season and I've been underpaid for years."

In the skit, Walker was finding Rickey a stubborn man, and was driven to an outburst of temper. "Don't forget, Branch," he said, "you can't take it with you."

Whereupon Rickey meditated only briefly before flinging back, "Well, then, I won't go."

THESE DAYS, Jackie Robinson is hinting that he will demand $50,000 from Rickey in his 1950 contract and even if there is a compromise in that figure he will be the highest-paid ballplayer in the Dodgers' history. Rickey has not indicated what his offer to Robinson is, but thus far Jackie has not signed. However, other club owners have been free with their advice to Rickey: Give him $50,000 and realize you have a good bargain.

If ever a ball player was worth that stipend, Robinson seems to qualify. Jackie enables the Dodgers to pay his salary out of exhibition-game profits alone, plus the salary of many another Brooklyn player. No team in history, including the old, fabulous Yankees with Babe Ruth, ever was in such demand for exhibition games as the Dodgers, and they chiefly because of Robinson.

He's a bigger box-office draw than Ted Williams, who drew close to $100,000 from the Red Sox, or Joe DiMaggio, who received $100,000 flat from the Yankees. Only Bob Feller and Babe Ruth in their primes stirred as much box-office interest as the first colored man ever to make the majors. And Jackie's distinction doesn't stop there. He was the National League's most valuable player last season.

IN BASEBALL, Rickey was the great emancipator of the colored man and on that score the race is beholden to him. He lifted the bar in 1947 by inviting Robinson into organized baseball with his Montreal farm club and then brought him up to the majors to send baseball's social barriers crashing completely. Granting that his motives were noble, they weren't without profit.

Rickey has had sensational good fortune with his colored players. He's batting 1.000 and it must be observed that he has great skill in choosing them. Of the three colored men now with the Dodgers, all are transcendant stars, and their success has started a run on skilled players who had been languishing in the Negro leagues.

With the Dodgers last season, Rickey had in Robinson the league's finest second baseman and batting champion; in Newcombe he had the finest young pitcher to break in in years, and in Rookie Roy Campanella he came up with a catcher who stirred the envy of every other club owner. Rickey's chief task now is to keep them happy.

Mikan Gets 25 as Lakers Turn Tables On Royals

Minneapolis, Jan. 15 (AP).—Minneapolis toppled Rochester, 85 to 73 tonight in a National Basketball Association game.

The Laker victory reversed last night's decision at Rochester in which George Mikan scored 51 points for a season's record and virtually tied up the central division lead again.

Mikan with 25 points was the Minneapolis scoring leader again tonight as the Lakers led from the start for their sixteenth victory in 17 home games.

For Rochester, Andy Duncan was high with 13 points.

Schayes also stood out as a rebounder and as a playmaker. Alex Groza of Indianapolis netted 24 points for scoring honors.

Virginia, VPI Considered Compliance

Richmond, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—The presidents of two of the schools which yesterday survived the NCAA'S sanity code showdown said today their institutions likely could comply with the code if the training table measure had passed.

The presidents were Colgate W. Darden, jr., of the University of Virginia, and Dr. Walter S. Newman of Virginia Tech.

"We were hopeful the training table measure would pass," said Darden.

"I did not say this in New York," commented Newman, "because I did not want to cloud the issue. But had the training table measure passed, I believe we could have complied."

Darden said he believed the seven violators "won" because of the militant support of the three Southern conferences and a number of Catholic schools."

Dr. Newman said that Virginia Tech officials would have to discuss what the next move of the Blacksburg (Va.) school will be both in regard of what to do next about subsidization and what recommendations to make to the Byrd committee.

"Our position has been upheld," said Dr. Newman. "But the New York meeting left a lot of unsolved problems. No agreement was reached on a sensible scholarship work agreement. The proper channelling of alumni assistance was left unsolved."

Byrd Move May Protect Them Until After Probe

By Will Grimsley

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Confusion swept through the National Collegiate Athletic Association today in the wake of a convention showdown that saw seven members defy the sanity code and get away with it.

The seven sinners — Virginia, Maryland, Virginia Tech, Virginia Military Institute, The Citadel, Boston College and Villanova—considered themselves exonerated when the NCAA failed to muster enough votes to expel them. Not so the NCAA, which announced the recalcitrants are not out of the doghouse and hinted of new reprisals.

"This is in no way a vindication," said Prof. Hugh C. Willett of Southern California, new president of the organization.

"It poses a peculior problem. We have these members who admit they are breaking the rules, who have been found guilty by the compliance committee and convicted by a majority vote of the whole convention.

May Pursue Matter Further

"What will be done about the situation, I don't know. The executive committee and council may pursue the matter further. It may be that the other NCAA members will decide themselves not to continue athletic relations with the violators. It's a delicate point."

In a seven-hour, uninterrupted session yesterday, the code violators won their battle against expulsion and at the same time extracted some teeth from the 2-year-old law governing athletic scholarships.

With a two-thirds vote required for expulsion, the NCAA delegates, their stomaches empty and their ears ringing with words, voted 111 to 93 to expel. That was 25 short.

Then the solid Southern and Southwest bloc, which led the fight for the defendants, pushed through a resolution aimed at giving the code a face-lifting that would satisfy the full membership.

Byrd Move May Protect

The move introduced by Dr. H. H. (Curley) Byrd of Maryland called for a special committee to make a complete survey of athletic subsidy practices and report its finds to the 1951 convention in Dallas.

The resolution has one kicker in it. It stipulates that further action "in regard to any specific in-

Byrd Doubts 'Sinners' Face Snubs

Dr. H. A. (Curley) Byrd, back at Maryland yesterday after the NCAA meeting, said that NCAA President Willet "has made a fair appraisal of the situation."

However, he doubted that any NCAA members would take matters into their own hands and cancel games with the seven "sinners" because it was generally agreed at the New York meeting to honor the 1951 schedules.

"There's a lot that's not right with the entire affair," Byrd declared, "but we have made progress and now we want more progress along the right lines.

"The Southern schools asked some questions and they have not been given adequate answers. But a large part of this will be thrashed out at a council meeting in the next month or six weeks."

Snead Misses Putt, Ties 3 for Title

Cooper Fights Garcia Tonight At Turner's

Jimmy Cooper, District featherweight champion, meets Lino Garcia, the Cuban titleholder, in the feature 10-rounder at Turner's Arena tonight.

Cooper needs the win tonight if he is to entertain any hope of getting a match with either World Bantamweight Champion Manuel Ortize or Featherweight King Willie Pep.

Cooper beat Ortiz in an overweight match at the ballpark last summer and wants another go at the Californian when the title is on the line.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez is attempting to bring in either Ortize or Pep or both for outdoor matches during the summer and is anxious to find a worthy opponent.

If he wins tonight Cooper would find himself on top of the heap of fighters under consideration, however, a loss would seriously hurt his prestige and might lose him the bout.

Garcia is a seasoned campaigner who patterns his style after that of Kid Chocolate, former world's champ, and will give Jimmy a lot of trouble tonight.

Preliminaries find Johnny Pratt, all-Army champ, meeting Benny Droll of Pittsburgh in a five-rounder and in fours, Jimmy O'Brien boxes Ralph Brown; Honey Boy Scott goes against George Corrigan, and Ben Kaiser takes on Jackie Earle.

Pep Defends Title Tonight

St. Louis, Jan. 15 (AP).—Challenger Chillin' Charley Riley is conceded only an outside chance as Willie Pep puts his world's featherweight crown on the line here tomorrow night.

Riley has a sharp, hard right-hand punch. He has an impressive knockout record, having floored 26 opponents in his more than 50 bouts during his career. He has gained 16 decisions. On the other hand, Riley dropped seven verdicts and was floored twice. He also has a draw.

Pep has been defeated only twice and has one draw in 144 contests in his professional career.

On the basis of their respective showing against Harold Dade, former world's bantamweight champion, Pep rates as the prohibitive favorite among fans here.

Pep defeated Dade on a card here last Monday. Riley was defeated on points in an appearance against Dade here some time back. Later he had a draw with Dade.

Longden's Sub Evens Matters, Defeats Woman

Agua Caliente, Mex., Jan. 15 (AP).—An apprentice jockey, billed as a substitute for the great Johnny Longden, today defeated Mrs. Wantha Davis in a match horse race here.

Glen Lasswell, San Ysidro, Calif., youngster, booted Powrie, a 5-year-old gelding, home 3½ lengths ahead of Mrs. Davis' Pleezwynne, a 4-year-old filly. Time for the six furlongs on the muddy track was 1:12.

Mrs. Davis, a veteran of Midwestern and Western county fair and bush track riding, defeated Longden in a match race here a month ago.

"I Think They're Interested"

McCarthy Wants to Purchase Football Browns for Houston

HOUSTON, Jan. 15 (AP).—Oilman Glenn McCarthy today said he would like to buy the Cleveland Browns and move their National-American Professional Football League franchise to Houston.

"I think they (the Browns) are interested in listening to me," McCarthy said.

McCarthy refused to discuss details of any plans for negotiating with the Cleveland club management.

He admitted he has been offered the playing personnel of the defunct Chicago Hornets of the ACC. He said there are so many problems connected with such a move he prefers to wait for the new league's decisions on such matters.

McCarthy's application for a franchise in the National-American is scheduled for discussion at the new league's first meeting this week in Philadelphia.

The oilman-hotel owner has decided to present his case at Philadelphia personally.

"I've changed my mind," he said. "At first I hadn't intended to go but I'm going to attend and do all in my power to see that Houston gets a franchise."

Events Free; No Guarantees

Johns Hopkins Is Example NCCA Can Safely Point Out

By George Bowen

Baltimore, Jan. 15 (AP).—Amidst all this yelling over subsidization of college athletes you wouldn't think there is in America a university where:

All home sports events are free, and

No guarantees of any sort are given or taken from opponents.

But this ideal of pure intercollegiate athletics does exist at Johns Hopkins University. It's nothing new there. It's been going on rather quietly for 15 years.

It was started by Dr. G. Wilson Shaffer, still the athletic director, as a "sports for all and all for sports" program.

However, what made the Hopkins deemphasis program really unique was abolishment of gate receipts, the factor that has pushed many colleges into a frenzy for a winning team.

Not only do Johns Hopkins opponents pay their way to Baltimore to play for nothing, but in return games they can keep all the gate receipts from their own crowds.

"If intercollegiate athletics have any value other than monetary," expounds Marshall S. Turner, director of physical education, "they should be financed by the university and controlled by the educational and not the monetary values.

"Our only purpose in eliminating guarantees and gate receipts is to remove any reason, or even the slightest temptation, to conduct our intercollegiate program other than for the educational value therein."

Well, Johns Hopkins appropriates $40,000 a year for athletics. That enables the university to field teams in 13 intercollegiate sports—traveling expenses and all.

Martin's Wins In Cup Soccer

In Baltimore's Rowland Cup soccer matches yesterday Martin's Bakery of Washington advanced to the semifinals while Marlboro was eliminated.

Douglas, Quick, Burke Equal His 214

By Russ Newland

Pebble Beach, Calif., Jan. 15 (AP).—Favorite Sam Snead missed a crucial putt on the final green and tied three others today in the Bing Crosby invitational golf tournament.

Slammin' Sam, the big gun, reverted to an old and costly habit in missing the putt. That put him into a deadlock at 214 with Dave Douglas, Wilmington, Del.; Smiley Quick, Culver City, Calif., and Jackie Burke, jr., White Plains, N. Y.

There will be no playoff. The four leaders will be identified as cowinners of the 1950 Crosby event.

The $10,000 54-hole tournament is played over three courses in three days.

Far back among the professionals, finishing in semi-darkness but followed by a huge gallery, came the tragic figure of the tournament. Little Ben Hogan, still limping from the auto accident that nearly took his life 11 months ago, posted a three-round total of 223.

It wasn't good enough to place him among the 15 money winning places. Not that he needs it. He won this same tournament a year ago with an eight-under-par total of 208 and rounds of 70-68—70 on the same three courses this time, he posted scores of 77-74—72 to tie for seventeenth place.

Hogan tied Snead last week for first place in the Los Angeles Open and will meet him in the playoff Wednesday.

Ben remarked ruefully, "I

D. C. Skaters Regain Senior, Junior Dance Cups

The Washington Figure Skating Club yesterday regained the senior dance and junior dance cups of the annual intercity ice-skating competition held Friday and Saturday at Carlin's Iceland in Baltimore.

Vera Halliday and Edward Picken combined to retake the senior dance cup, which they held in 1948 but lost last year.

Anne Lockwood and George Fuller won the junior dance cup for the local club.

Terps Given 2 Days' Rest

Maryland University's basketball team will get a couple of days off from practice beginning today, Coach Flucie Stewart announced last night.

After seeing the Terps drop their twelfth game in 14 tries last Saturday night to George Washington, 72-51, Stewart decided that perhaps a couple days off would be in order before next Saturday night's game with William and Mary, at Williamsburg.

Stewart had no criticism to make of the boys' play against GW, he said. "The boys did their best, but GW was hot, while our shooting was off."

Sports "Terribly Overrated"

5-Day, 40-Hour Week for Yale Athletes Urged

Top Student Leaders Actually Recommend De-Emphasis of Sports

By Lou Black

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 15 (AP).—Yale's top student leaders—the campus big shots, today urged what amounts to a 5-day, 40-hour week for Ivy League athletes. These aren't the exact figures, but that's the general idea.

They feel that the stout-hearted lads who give their all in sports combat for dear old alma mammy are being overworked.

They are the members of Yale's Torch Society. This organization, Yale's top honor group, consists of seniors who have distinguished themselves in various fields of academic and extra-curricular campus activities.

De-emphasis of sports is what they're recommending.

In their statement, they said they want Yale, and the other Ivy Leaguers including Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, Columbia and Brown "to undertake to stop the tide toward excessive time spent on athletics by voluntarily limiting the role of major sports."

They see professionalism rearing its ugly head. It is their opinion "that the intensity of university athletics has grown to a point inconsistent with the best interests of well-balanced higher education."

Specifically, Torch recommends:

1. A maximum 12-week season with no supervised team practice allowed except within that season.

2. A maximum of two hours spent per day in any supervised aspect of a major sport (not counting transportation time).

Hardest hit, should these points be adopted, would be football and crew. When head football mentor Herman Hickman and Crew Coach Allen Walz read about this, they'll probably yell bloody murder. And what some old Blues might do won't be fit to print.

Spring football practice is a "must" among most football coaches. The crew season at Yale never seems to end. And Yale has even had fall baseball drills in recent years.

The signers of the statement include Vic Frank, chairman of the Yale Undergraduate Athletic Association, who is an ace footballer, captain of the 1950 track team, and a member of the 1948 Olympic track squad; Dick Joyce, basketball captain; Charley Keller, track and football star; Dale Liechty, chairman of the Yale Christian Mission, and Bob Raines, secretary of the class of 1950, football players; Pete Blair, captain of the squash team and chairman of the class day committee.

Others are Alan Anderson, member of Phi Beta Kappa and editor of the Yale literary magazine; Paul Bridston, captain of the golf team, and Bill Buckley, jr., chairman of the Yale Daily News.

They Want "Tide Toward Excessive Time Spent on Athletics" Stopped

The young Blues decided to express themselves, one of them said, after a "bull session devoted to the hindsight of our careers at Yale. We agreed that we have derived benefits from athletics, but concluded varsity sports are terribly overrated."

In their statement, they suggested:

"Regardless of whether other colleges act on these proposals, we recommend that Yale consider acting individually, should the need arise, to curb a movement that threatens to engulf an excessive part of the student day."

They declared:

"These proposals are made in the full recognition of the financial value of first-class college athletic teams. We feel that if other Ivy League colleges participated in an organized slow-down, all teams would be affected proportionately, and that the relative decrease in proficiency would not substantially affect gate receipts.

"But we feel that athletic income notwithstanding, college sports must be made to adhere to their proper position in college life, and thus stem the drive toward professionalism."

DEAR FOLKS:

The best price paid in England's tote betting during the past seven years was on a horse named Woodcraft — 84.50 for each 28 cents bet. However, few British race-goers bother with the automatic betting, preferring to deal with the bookies. The difference is that with the books you know what you'll get at the time of the bet while with the tote, the payoff depends on the trend of the wagering. Speaking of betting, a track official in this country said, "We can expect betting to drop. We are going through a leveling off period." To which a friend remarked "It's leveling off all right, but lets hope that it doesn't go below sea level." That was a pretty fair Calumet Farm coast-to-coast parlay Saturday—Two Lea to Armed. Every chalk player in the United States had some of that.

Recheck Shows 'Mile' Track At Armory Was 69.3 Ft. Short

By The Associated Press

A miss is as good as a mile—or is it?

Not quite, for the star track games Saturday night came up with a short track. Don Gehrmann of Wisconsin hit the tape in the mile race with a magnificent burst of speed, and the timers gave a magnificent gasp.

The watches showed he had run the race in 4 minutes, 1.6 seconds, far faster than anyone ever had run a mile. Gil Dodds, for instance, holds the indoor record at 4:05.3. There was a hasty huddle, a guess as to how short the track was, and an estimate that if Gehrmann had run the full mile he would have done it in 4:13.6.

Dorsey Griffith, the director, said yesterday.

"I have rechecked the track and it is 53.3 feet short per lap. Gehrmann ran 69.3 yards less than a mile."

The error came because, without Griffith's knowing it, someone had broken and repaired his steel tape. Unfortunately Griffith's unknown little helper had left out about six feet of the tape, throwing off all the measurements longer than 100 yards.

stitution" be deferred until after the report is received.

This, in effect, reduces the NCAA to a regulatory body with no power to regulate and its compliance committee to a cop without a billy.

Willett, however, was quick to scotch any ideas that the bars are now down and the sky's the limit on scholarships.

"I have informed Mr. Houston (Clarence P. Houston, chairman of the compliance committee) to continue his investigations and make his reports as usual," the new president declared.

"Constitutionally, the sanity code is still in effect and so are the agencies needed to enforce it. I have an open mind on the matter and hope we can achieve a set of laws that will permit us to find a common ground."

Houston already has announced that 10 additional institutions have been found guilty of code violations. What can be done to these or any others caught with the goods is problematical under the "hands off" dictate of the Southern resolution adopted in yesterday's haste to get away.

The Southern forces hope to gain a code that would permit open scholarships, under strict university supervision. The present code limits athletics scholarships to the needy and the scholarly and specifies an athlete must work for his keep.

Dr. Karl Leib of Iowa, outgoing president and "father" of the code, refused to interpret the failure to expel as a defeat. He says it proved that many felt expulsion was too severe a penalty in the cases.

Asked if he thought the code and the NCAA's governing powers were dead during the survey for revisions, the little Iowan replied:

"I should say not. That survey probably will take five years."

Snead Misses Putt, Ties Quick, Douglas and Burke for Title shouldn't have tried to make two tournaments in a row." Although weary, he participated here to help make the Crosby event a success again.

Profits of the tournament go to two local charities.

Had Snead knocked in the 8-footer on the eighteenth green at Pebble Beach today, while a gallery running into the thousands looked on, he would have won undisputed first place in Crooner Crosby's yearly links classic.

But the ball went by the hole and dropped the PGA champion into a four-way tie. The three others in the deadlock had finished their final round earlier.

Snead had rounds of 69-72-73. Douglas scored 71-73-70, Quick, 72-69-73 and Burke, 75-67-72.

In 1947, Snead missed the famous 30½-inch putt at St. Louis Country Club to lose the U. S. Open playoff to Lew Worsham of Washington, D. C. It was on the eighteenth hole.

The final round opened today with Snead, Quick and Marty Furgol of Albuquerque tied at 141.

Furgol floundered on the mushy fairways. He took an 80 and fell far back.

The pro-amateur best ball phase of the competition ended in a tie at 201. Amateur Bud Moe of Spokane and Pro Ralph Blomquist of Glendale, Calif., turned in best rounds of 69-64-68. Marty Furgol and Amateur Don Edwards of San Jose, Calif., shared the top spot with 68-64-69.

Bing Crosby sat out today's final round. He and Pebble Beach Pro Cam Pugett fired a 72-71-143 for the first 36 holes in the pro-amateur division. That was nine strokes off the leaders at that point.

Frank (Lefty) Odoul, manager of the San Francisco baseball club, and his pro partner, Bill Nary of Los Angeles, won the best ball prize last year with 196. They were well back this time with 211.

NO FASTER ARTHRITIC PAIN RELIEF KNOWN... SAFE

CLINIC TESTED Stops Swelling of Painful Joints . . . Contains Sensational New Research Discovery

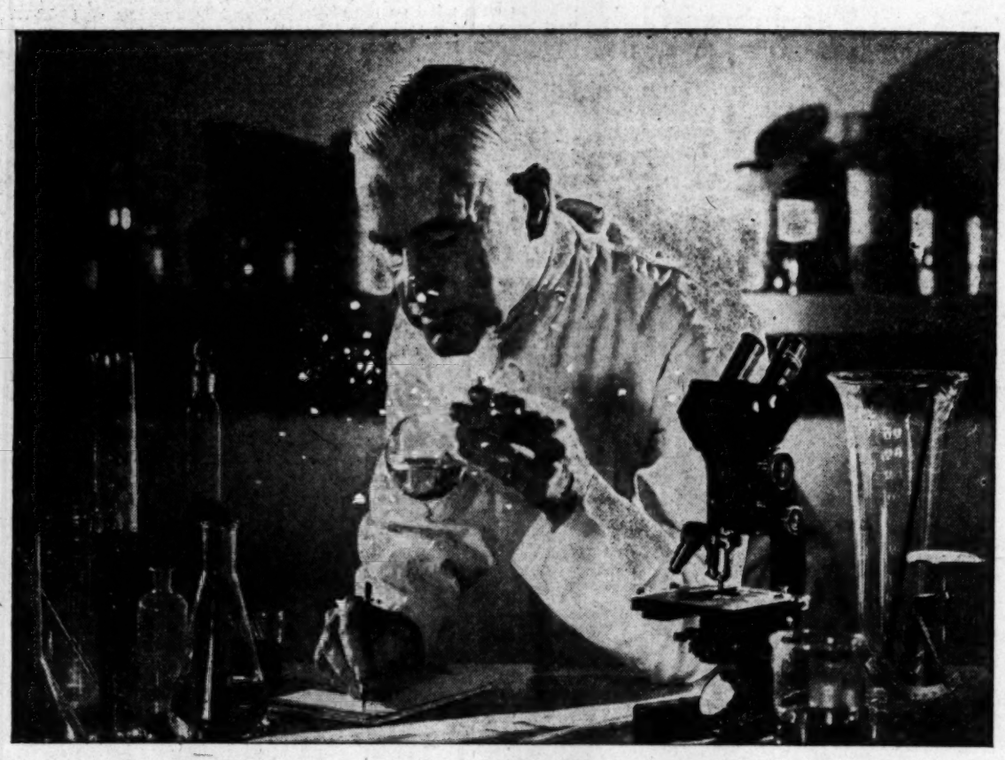
NEW, SAFE, SCIENTIFIC TABLET

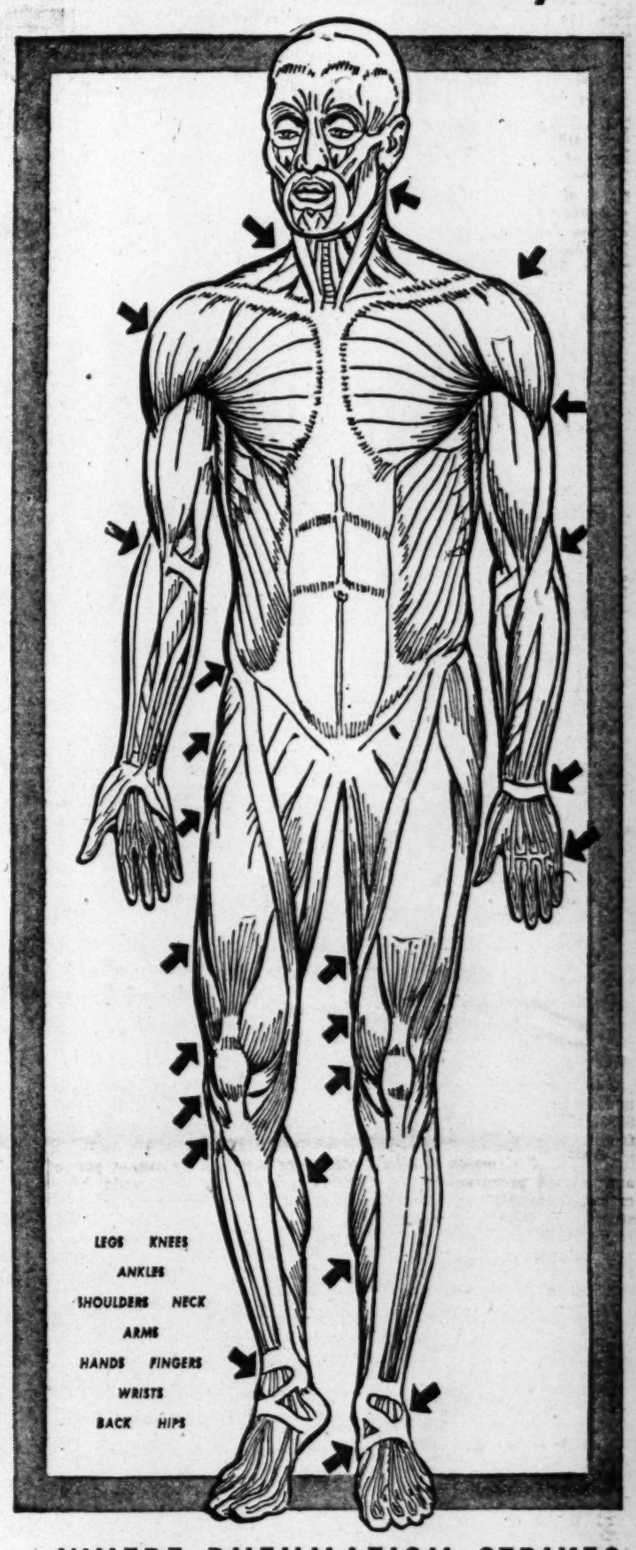
Not a Narcotic . . . Not Habit Forming . . .

AT LAST THE STORY CAN BE TOLD! Medical science developed the amazing wonder-working drugs Sulfa and Penicillin . . . then turned attention to relieving the agonizing pains caused by rheumatism and arthritis. The result of extensive research is a wonder working ingredient which is now combined with other pharmaceuticals into a remarkable preparation called IMDRIN. Longtime sufferers from rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, and gout may find IMDRIN gives glorious relief so sensationally fast it's really amazing! There's nothing faster available to the public today. Contains no dope or harmful drugs. Only after years of clinical work and testing was this fast, safe pain-killer developed, but today it is REALITY. If you suffer rheumatic pain ask for IMDRIN at drug stores.



DEVELOPED AFTER YEARS OF EXTENSIVE CLINICAL TESTS

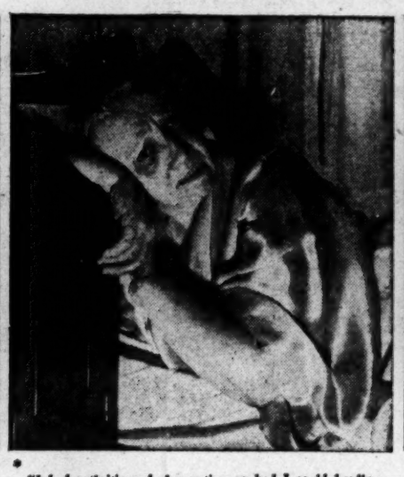
IMDRIN has been a closely guarded experimental secret before release for public use. Yes, medical men, after years of extensive clinical tests, have proved conclusively that IMDRIN works internally toward amazing reduction of pain, heat, redness and swelling in the joints. Patients undergoing IMDRIN therapy in these clinics often were able to start comfortable living completely after other remedies had failed. Every victim of rheumatism, arthritis, neuritis, sciatica, gout, neuralgia, etc., should investigate this new development of modern medicine. Ask for IMDRIN at drug stores. Truly IMDRIN is today's big proprietary success.



Relieves Pain and Suffering After Years of Torture!

"I call IMDRIN a boon and you can understand why when I tell you that the pain which had tortured and crippled me, and for which there seemed no relief, was gone after I had taken IMDRIN. Now, for the first time in years, I can move about without pain. Surely the thousands of unfortunates like me who are seeking relief from the pains of arthritis should be happy to learn about the blessed, fast-acting ingredient which IMDRIN contains. It surely goes to work fast and gets results."

Gratefully yours,
A. C.
Chicago, Illinois



"I had arthritis and rheumatism so bad I could hardly get around. Well, I had about given up hope when I saw your ad in the paper and bought a bottle of IMDRIN. I really think it's splendid. I feel better with every dose I take. It seems like a dream to be free of so much pain."

MRS. A. R. W.
Amarillo, Texas

"I am not getting paid for these words, but I want everyone to know what I know about IMDRIN. I had rheumatism and arthritis pains in my left shoulder and arm so bad I could hardly use it. Everytime I moved my arm it hurt just like sticking a knife into it. I was like a one-armed person. Then I tried IMDRIN. Now since I have IMDRIN, I suffer no more pain! No one can realize the fast relief it gives a person that suffered like I did. IMDRIN is worth hundreds of dollars to me."

A. C. S.

WHERE RHEUMATISM STRIKES ... AND HOW TO DETECT IT!

Rheumatic and arthritic pain and inflammation can strike the joints in any of the indicated affected areas. (See arrows in chart above.) But these diseases have many forms and each form has varying symptoms. Rheumatoid arthritis is an infection of the joints which fill with fluid; the skin around them may be red, the joints themselves swollen and painful. Still another form is specific infectious arthritis.

All these various forms of arthritis and rheumatism are accompanied by pain; very often swelling and loss of function of the joints. Clinical test patients undergoing IMDRIN therapy, some of whom had suffered hopelessly for years, were able to begin happy, comfortable living once the pain subsided and their confidence grew. In cases where the joints were swollen, IMDRIN, working internally, reduced swelling and eased pain rapidly. These patients, many of whom had given up hope, were able to begin comfortable living. It is true that response to IMDRIN varied occasionally and your own experience may or may not coincide with that of patients tested. But IMDRIN today is your greatest hope. IMDRIN, with the new wonder-working ingredient, may give you the same blessed successful results. Get IMDRIN today!

Civilian Personnel Changes Provided In Truman Budget

The President's budget provides these civilian personnel changes at Army headquarters here:

Adjutant General's Office: increase, from 2915 to 3036 jobs. Chief of Staff's Office: decline, from 1810 to 1656. Secretary's Office: increase, from 895 to 905. Inspector General: decline, 58 to 56. Judge Advocate General: decline, 174 to 165. Office of Chief of Finance: no change in 393-man staff. Office of the Quartermaster General: increase, 1701 to 1724.

Chief of Transportation: increase, 776 to 779. Office of Chief Signal Officer: decline, 617 to 612. Office of Chief of Special Services: no change in 17-man staff. Office of Provost Marshal General: decline, 38 to 35. Office of Surgeon General: decline, 711 to 695. Office of Chief of Engineers: decline, 829 to 790. Chief of Ordnance: decline, 918 to 912. Chief of Chemical Corps: increase, 163 to 176. Chief of Chaplains: increase, 36 to 38.

The President recommended a million-dollar increase in his budget to pay salaries and expenses of departmental employes here, from $56,339,122 to $57,400,000.

Thousands of Army civilians here, however, are paid from funds other than those specifically set aside for departmental salaries. The budget makes no attempt to estimate the average number of these additional Army jobs in and nearby this city during the 1951 fiscal year to begin next July 1.

NAVY: The 1951 budget for it as proposed by the President makes no distinction between civilian jobs here and in the field service. Navy's budget has been revamped to merge nearly 60 separate appropriations into half a dozen major items. The average number of civilian jobs provided are lumped together in them.

Nevertheless, it's clear from the available information that Navy must continue to reduce its "average" number of civilian employes. For example:

Under the combined aircraft and facilities budget, the number of civilians is reduced from an anticipated average of 71,925 during this fiscal year to 64,281 for the 1951 fiscal year. For ships and facilities, the number of civilians is given another whopping cut, from 66,329 to 54,394. Other Navy budget provisions for civilians are:

Naval personnel (general expenses): an increase, from 9313 to 9699; Marine Corps (troops and facilities): a decline, from 10,798 to 10,709. Construction of aircraft and related procurement: an increase, from 2067 to 2084. Construction of ships: a large increase, from 10,768 to 16,159. Ordnance and facilities: a decline, from 32,872 to 29,427. Ordnance for new construction: a big increase, from 1577 to 4944. Medical care: a reduction, from 8834 to 8479. Civil engineering: a slight decline, from 8487 to 8427.

Research: another cut from 4133 to 3997. Service-wide supply and finance: a cut from 48,652 to 44,259. And Service-wide operations: a reduction from 16,763 to 15,427. In that appropriation, funds are provided to pay the salaries of departmental employes here, as well as those in Navy's five record centers, the Hydrographic Office and Naval Observatory here.

The budget clearly states that the average civilian employment in the military agencies for the 1951 fiscal year under the President's budget would be 725,000.

The latest count by Civil Service showed 326,478 civilians in the Army; 299,561 in the Navy; 154,113 in the Air Force, and 1714 in the Defense Department, or a total of 781,866. A reduction in average employment of 56,861 civilians in the military agencies is indicated in the budget.

Pope's Bid To Christians Rejected by Dr. Pruden

Baptist Minister Sees Any 'Return' To Catholic Church Violating Beliefs

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

A Washington Baptist clergyman yesterday rejected Pope Pius XII's invitation to all Christians to "return" to the Roman Catholic Church, with the declaration that Christian unity isn't "dependent upon a highly organized ecclesiastical body."

Dr. Pruden

Speaking at First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw., the Rev. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden said his response to the Pope's invitation was "a sincere attempt to give a brotherly answer to an invitation sincerely extended."

In his message opening the Holy Year on Christmas Eve, the Pope expressed the hope that the year would see "the great return to the one true church, awaited over the centuries, of so many who though believing in Jesus Christ are for various reasons separated from her."

"Brotherly Spirit"

Dr. Pruden said his response was presented in "the most sympathetic and brotherly spirit" and that he had "no desire whatever to be a party to a religious controversy or a theological debate."

The Baptist church, Dr. Pruden said, "is committed to a policy of freedom not only for the local congregation but also for the individual Christian."

Any arrangements through which Catholics and Protestants work together as Christians, he said, "must guarantee to us as individuals and as local churches that liberty of conscience and action for which our forefathers in the faith suffered and died."

"We believe sincerely that the spiritual forces of the world should stand unitedly against atheistic communism and all of its totalitarian powers, but we cannot possibly believe that this could be achieved by asking millions of Christians to violate their consciences and forsake the free spiritual atmosphere which they have breathed so long in order to become a part of a totalitarian religious organization," Dr. Pruden declared.

Fail to Cooperate

Many Protestant attempts to work in closer cooperation with Catholics "have failed because of the position which the Catholic Church has taken in regard to its alleged primary place in the world as the only true representative of Christ and His Gospel," Dr. Pruden said.

"It is rather difficult for many of us to understand why the Pope should entertain any substantial expectation that Protestants would forsake their own convictions and unite with the Catholic Church when the Church of Rome refuses to grant to Protestants those elementary expressions of cooperation on a spiritual level which would eventually pave the way for a growing sense of unity," he said.

Even the Pope's invitation, though "sincerely extended," is a "formidable hindrance to a larger degree of spiritual unity, since it only serves to perpetuate the ancient claim of the Roman Catholic Church that it is 'the one true church,'" Dr. Pruden said.

True spiritual unity among the followers of Christ will come only through "full recognition of a common loyalty to Christ as the one supreme authority of our lives, and an unshakable determination to do His will . . . in a spirit of love and brotherhood toward all those who are striving to do the same thing," Dr. Pruden said.

Dr. Pruden is pastor of the church which President Truman attends.

Government Figures Attend C. U. Red Mass

Msgr. Cartwright Says World Ruled By Two Laws Now

Members of Congress, the judiciary and the diplomatic corps yesterday attended the annual Red Mass at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University.

The mass is held each year to mark the resumption of work by Congress and the courts. Its title comes from the petition of the mass, which seeks the aid of the Holy Spirit, symbolized by the flaming fire of divine love and wisdom.

In his sermon, the Right Rev. Msgr. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's Cathedral, declared that two kinds of law rule in the world today—the law of fear and the law of reverence.

Reverence, which comes out of the conscience of man and "needs to be both enlightened and animated by religion" is the basis of the law of freedom, which "can function only when the masses and multitudes of men reverence the law of freedom as the gift of God."

American law has understood that it is rooted in the religious conscience, and has respected religion "not only for what it is in itself, the deepest rooted of all human rights, but for its civilizing function of creating in the public mind the climate of reverence which is the only climate in which the law of freedom can exist," Msgr. Cartwright said.

Among those who attended the mass were: Attorney George Morris Fay, Judges Charles Fahy, David L. Bazelon and George T. Washington of the United States Court of Appeals; Judges Charles T. McLaughlin, Alexander Holtzoff, Edward M. Curran, Mrs. Burnita Matthews and Matthew M. McGuire of District Court, and Judges Armond W. Scott and Thomas D. Quinn of Municipal Court.

Others were Senators Pat McCarran (D.(Nev.) and Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews and presidential secretary Charles G. Ross.

South Capitol Span Operator Says Job Can Be Lonely One

The Washington Post

Bridge operator Charles Thompson in control cabin

The new South Capitol Street Bridge is "a big hunk of iron when you start swinging it around," Bridge Operator Charles H. Thompson said yesterday.

Thompson, a District Government employe who lives at 718 Xenia st. ne., was working the 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. shift yesterday on the five-million-dollar bridge, which was opened for traffic following dedication ceremonies Saturday. A bridge operator and two guards are on duty continuously around the clock.

Operating the draw, which swings around to open and is reputed to be the largest plate-girder span in the world, is not difficult if you are "mechanically minded," said Thompson.

Standing before the instrument panel in one of the two cabins at the peak of the 2800-foot span—3250-foot, including approach ramps—it sounded easy, too, as Thompson explained the gadgets, the compass in the center that indicated the location of the draw at all times, the little lights that indicate what is going on when the draw is in operation, and the "dead man's control." The latter is a foot pedal.

"Take your foot off it and it cuts the current off stopping everything," he said.

Having taken a physical examination for the job similar to that given Metropolitan policemen, he is not anticipating a heart attack while operating the controls.

Born in Huntington, W. Va., 36 years ago, Thompson grew up there and later lived in Cumberland, Md. He subsequently spent about eight years at the United States Naval Gun Factory as a machinist before becoming a bridge operator this past November at the Anacostia Bridge. He has been at the South Capitol Street Bridge 10 days.

From the control cabin he can look out and see the Gun Factory. From the cabin opposite, across the bridge, he can look down the Anacostia River. In that cabin is a two-way radio connecting him with the "outside world."

"It can be a more or less lonely job," admitted Thompson.

But yesterday Thompson had lots of company—outside the window—as pedestrians and automobiles crowded across the bridge. Late in the afternoon it took more than half an hour to cross the bridge due to the jam of Sunday sightseers.

$900 in Liquor Lost as Auto Crashes Store

Woman's Leg Broken, Streetcar Hits Boy In 2 Other Accidents

Liquor worth about $900 was reported "lost, strayed or stolen" as the result of a traffic accident at 4 a. m. yesterday at 18th st. and Florida ave. nw.

The liquor was either destroyed or "picked up by passersby" after an automobile crashed through the plate glass window of Queen's Liquor Store, police said.

Eugene Carlyle, 18, 5733 S. 3d st., Arlington, was treated at Emergency Hospital for head cuts and then released. Police said he was a passsenger in the auto driven by Clyde E. Hawkins, jr., 21, 501 N. Thomas st., Arlington, who forfeited $25 collateral on a charge of operating his automobile at an unreasonable speed.

Two other persons were injured in District-area traffic mishaps yesterday.

Miss Nannie Boyle, 82, 4316 Hartwick rd., College Park, Md., was struck by an automobile as she was en route to church shortly before 11 a. m., and Ronnie Bishop, 6, 1432 K st. se., was struck by a streetcar at Potomac ave. and Pennsylvania ave. se., at 1 p. m.

Miss Boyle was admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, with a broken leg and lacerations of the face and body. Maryland State police said she was struck on the Baltimore blvd., near College Park by an auto operated by Isaac Anderson, 21, of Quantico, Md. Anderson was released under $500 bond for a hearing in Hyattsville Police Court January 27 on a charge of reckless driving.

The Bishop boy, according to police, was struck by a streetcar operated by Worth B. Shafer, 40, Herndon, Va. He was admitted to Providence Hospital for treatment of head injuries.

Police, who reported the streetcar failed to stop after striking the lad, charged Shafer with failure to report an accident. He was released in custody of Capital Transit Co. officials for hearing at a later date in the Corporation Council's office.

Man Critically Wounded, Woman Held in Shooting

Lonnie Lucas, 32, was in critical condition in Emergency Hospital yesterday after a Saturday night quarrel with his common-law wife in front of their home at 1248 Union st. sw.

The argument, police said, began when Lucas called for his wife, Virginia Bowman, who was visiting across the street. As they started back, police said, the woman shot Lucas in the abdomen with a .32 caliber pistol.

She was charged with assault with intent to kill and held at the Women's Bureau for a hearing in Municipal Court today.

2 Held in Theft Of Empty Safe After 2 Chases

'Polly' Brown Alleged Dope Leaders Held In Hot Raid

Poultry Co. Looted; New Police Squad Arrests Three in Restaurant Robbery

Police and Treasury agents who raided a house at 1328 Harrison pl. se., Saturday night, seized eight ounces of literally hot heroin and arrested two men, one of whom was on parole from a dope conviction sentence.

The raiders, led by Lieut. H. H. Carper, head of the police narcotics squad, heard people rushing upstairs when they knocked on the door. As they reached the second floor, Lamar E. (Polly) Brown, 45, of 1537 C st. se., was stuffing heroin into a stovepipe they said.

Besides recovering two ounces of the dope from the stovepipe, they saved six more ounces which had fallen into the hot stove, the raiders said. Brown, who had served three and a half years of a five-year sentence on narcotics charges, was charged with violation of parole, the Harrison and Jones-Miller narcotics acts. He was placed in the custody of the United States Marshal's office.

Bernard A. Brown, 33, of 1405 A st. se., no relation to Lamar, who was in the room, was also charged with violating the two narcotics acts after three capsules of heroin were found in his pocket, according to police. He was released on $1500 bond for appearance this morning before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

The raiders were armed with a warrent charging Lamar Brown with parole violation.

The Police Department's new safe squad got its first case yesterday.

It involved the attempted theft of an empty safe that included a chase of 60 to 70 miles an hour through the city streets.

And it resulted in the capture and arrest of two of three suspects.

The case started on an appropriate note of comedy. At about 5:45 a. m. Corpl. Percy Duvall and Sergt. James L. Sadtler of the Accident Investigation Unit drove through the 400 block of L st. nw. in traffic car 7.

They saw a car parked in front of the Federal Beef Co., 478 L st. nw. One man was behind the wheel and two others were attempting to hoist a safe into the back of a car.

Drop Safe and Flee

Seeing the police vehicle, the driver of the other car sped off. The other men dropped the safe and fled on foot.

The AIU men immediately gave a radio alarm by radio to headquarters and took after the getaway car.

Within minutes seven more police vehicles were at the scene. Some took up a search for the men who had fled on foot; others went in pursuit of the getaway car.

First on the scene were three men of the new safe squad, Detective Sergts. William Friel, Irving Lubore and John Hayes.

The auto chase ended at 4th and K sts. ne., when the car careened across a sidewalk and crashed into a yard fence. The driver fled, but was captured at 4th st. and Florida ave. ne., by Pvts. Adam Arney and Ray Swank in a Ninth Precinct scout car.

Enter Through Skylight

The man identified himself as James Nelson, 42, of 2350 6th st. nw.

Meanwhile, the two who had fled on foot apparently had gotten away. However, at 9 a. m. one, David James Wilson, 48, of 614 2d st. nw., was arrested by Pvt. John T. O'Brien of the Second Precinct in the 400 block of New York ave. nw.

Investigation of the 300-pound safe showed an attempt was made to jimmy it open. The dial had been knocked off.

The men entered the Federal Beef Co. through a skylight, jimmied open the front door and rolled the safe out to the sidewalk.

Morris Cohn, owner of the business, told police the safe was empty. He said, however, the men took an undetermined amount of cash.

Nelson and Wilson were charged with housebreaking and will be arraigned in Municipal Court today.

At about 3 a. m. yesterday, safe squad detectives arrested three men in connection with the theft of a safe last November 27 at the Stagecoach Restauran', 1306 Good Hope rd. se.

The 150-pound safe which was removed from the restaurant contained $859 in cash and $700 worth of checks. The thieves also took $167 from a cash register.

Police said the men, arrested on "information," are Cary W. Holmes, 41, of 4518 Canal rd. nw.; Charles M. Thorn, 24, of 1612 U st. se., and Richard J. Elam, 21, of 1526 Good Hope rd. se.

All were charged with housebreaking and will be arraigned in Municipal Court today.

Alexandria Woman Dies In Home Fire

A 50-year-old Alexandria woman died in a fire in a bedroom of her apartment at 2701 Mount Vernon ave., Alexandria, early yesterday.

Police identified her as Mrs. Claude Webb. Her husband, a printer in the Government Printing Office, slept in an adjoining bedroom until he was roused by smoke.

Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria coroner, who pronounced Mrs. Webb dead on the scene, said he was awaiting the results of pathological tests to determine whether she died of suffocation or burns.

Webb told police he found his wife's room enveloped in smoke and flames after he was awakened. He called firemen at 4:22 a. m. after vainly trying to stop the flames with a pail of water from the kitchen.

Fire Chief Bernard J. Padgett said a partially filled pack of cigarettes and several cigarette butts were found in the bedroom and expressed the belief Mrs. Webb had dozed off while smoking.

He said it was possible that the mattress had smoldered for several hours before the fire was discovered and that Mrs. Webb had been suffocated before she was burned.

Military Road Fast-Traffic Plan Put Off

Conversion of Military rd. into a fast-traffic highway across Rock Creek Park has been postponed until next year at least, and probably longer.

Last fall the District Highways Department included in its budget estimates $1,265,000 to construct a Military rd. underpass at 16th st. nw. and a Military rd. bridge across Rock Creek.

It was planned to ask for about $600,000, probably in fiscal 1952, to rebuild the road into a divided highway.

However, results of a metropolitan area origin and destination survey showed other work more urgently needed, highway officials said, and the funds have been switched.

If Congress approves, half the money will go into the proposed new Anacostia River bridge. Most of the rest will be used to give a permanent surface treatment to more than 1½ miles of streets in the eastern part of the city. They are:

South Dakota ave. ne., from Allison st. to Riggs rd. ($337,000); Benning rd. se. from Hana pl. to Southern ave. ($350,000); Southern ave. se., from its intersection with Benning rd. to Bowen rd. ($41,400).

Deputy Director of Highways Samuel R. Harrison said these streets are classed as arterial highways, but have never been given a permanent surface. Located in newly developed areas on the outskirts of the city, they have been paved largely with material salvaged from resurfaced downtown streets.

In each case the cost will be shared equally by the District and Federal Governments.

Lawyer Found Shot At NW Home Dies

A 47-year-old patent attorney died last night at Emergency Hospital, a few hours after he was found lying shot on his bedroom floor.

Clarence L. Parker, member of the law firm of Parker & Walsh, was discovered shortly after 2 p. m. face down on the bedroom floor of his home at 3937 McKinley st. nw., by his wife, Mrs. Margaret H. Parker.

Police reported a .32 caliber semi-automatic pistol was under his body with one bullet discharged. Parker was taken to Emergency Hospital where he died at 7:45 p. m. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said the bullet entered the left temple and emerged on the right side of his head. He issued a certificate of death due to suicide.

No witnesses to the shot were reported by investigating officer Detective Sergt. R. E. Talbot, who said Parker's two daughters attended late services at St. Albans Episcopal Church and that the mother was also away from the home until shortly before 2 p. m.

Talbot said that Mrs. Parker had prepared breakfast for her husband who was still in bed when she left the house around 11 a. m. She returned shortly for the children who thought their father was still asleep, he said.

She then investigated, found him still in his bed clothes, prone before the dresser in the second-floor bedroom, the officer said.

Talbot added that Parker had been on a special det for high blood pressure and for internal bleeding, and had suffered strokes on at least two occasions.

Parker, a native of Washington, was admitted to the local bar in 1927. He was graduated from Princeton University with an A. B. in 1924; received his LL.B. from George Washington University in 1928; and his M. P. L. from National University.

He was an assistant patent examiner in the United States Patent Office, 1925-26, and at one time was professor of patent law at the graduate school of Southeastern University here.

Mr. Parker, his wife and two daughters, Patsy and Jean, lived at the McKinley st. address. His office was in the Washington Building, 1434 New York ave. nw.

Gen. Devers Offered Post As 'Fair' Boss

Gen. Jacob L. Devers, retired chief of the Army Field Forces, yesterday confirmed reports he has been asked to serve as general manager of the Sesquicentennial Freedom Fair.

The general, who is now managing director of the American Automobile Association's Foundation for Traffic Safety, said he has not made up his mind but is seriously considering the offer.

Joseph C. McGarraghy, chairman of the Sesquicentennial Commission's executive committee, recently discussed the matter with General Devers. Appointment of a general manager, it is expected, will be on the agenda of a commission meeting early next month at the White House. President Truman is chairman.

In his 40 years in the Army, from which he retired last October 1, General Devers was known for his ability to cut red tape and get things done.

His experience in directing several Army construction programs—including a five-million-dollar project at West Point and one of 40 million at Fort Bragg, N. C.—would be useful in the Freedom Fair planning, which involves some nine million dollars for buildings.

General Devers lives with his wife and daughter on a farm in Herndon, where he is raising cattle.

George Nicolson hands piece of cake to the Rev. Mr. Sharp

Church Honors G. L. Nicolson, Vestryman

Members of St. John's Episcopal Church, Georgetown, yesterday paid tribute to George L. Nicolson, veteran vestryman, on his eighty-sixth birthday.

Nicolson, who lives at 3013 Q st. nw., has been a vestryman of St. John's church for 58 years. For the past 36 years he has been senior warden of the vestry, which represents the congregation in the church government.

Before a large birthday cake Nicolson received the thank of the rector of St. John's Church, the Rev. William MacDowell Sharp, and of the congregation.

Nicolson came to the District in 1889 from Middlesex County, Va., to be engineed in charge of the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal and stayed on as general manager of the canal from 1900 until it was bought by the Government in 1940.

When the Potomac flooded its banks and broke through the canal in those early days, Nicolson had only men and mules to repair the damage. They worked as well and nearly as quickly as the modern mechanical equipment used in floods of recent years, he said.

In 1900 Nicolson and Daniel Smith organized the District of Columbia Paper Manufacturing Co., of which Nicolson was president until 1948. As president of the board of the company, Nicolson is still active and goes to his office each day. His son, L. D. Nicolson is now president.

His first wife died in 1911 and his second in 1937. His four children are L. D. Nicolson, 4347 Forest la. nw., and Hugh T. Nicolson, 3 Duvall dr. nw., both of whom were present for the celebration, Henry Whitcomb Nicolson, Newark, N. J., and Mrs. Garland Sydnor, Richmond, Va.

Clarence Reed, Agriculture Expert, Dies

Clarence A. Reed, 69, retired Takoma Park nut culture expert of the Department of Agriculture, died yesterday in Lakeland, Fla., of a heart disease. He had been ill for several years, and had retired in 1947 after 40 years of scientific work with the Government.

Mr. Reed

The Agriculture Department credited Mr. Reed with developing two varieties of improved filberts, and with much of the groundwork for the creation of the paper-shell pecan.

A native of Howell, Mich., Mr. Reed graduated from Michigan State College in 1905, and in 1913 received his master's from the graduate school in horticulture.

Prior to entering the Government in 1907, he was employed by a Midwestern landscaping firm and on the horticultural staffs of Maryland State College and the University of West Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station.

Most of his four decades with the Bureau of Plant Industry were spent in improving the varieties and cultures of nuts. Part of the credit for congressional appropriations for nut investigation and the establishment of Government pecan experiment stations in many sections of the country was attributed to Mr. Reed's pioneer efforts especially in the South and Southwestern States.

Included among the numerous bulletins and papers dealing with nut culture written by Mr. Reed are articles on various kinds of nuts in the Enclycopedia Britannica.

A member of the Cosmos Club for a quarter century, Mr. Reed also belonged to the Washington Academy of Science, the National Pecan Association and the Northern Nut Growers Association, of which he was a past president.

He was also a counseler-at-large for the National Boy Scouts.

In Takoma Park, Mr. Reed was equally active. He belonged to such varied organizations as the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department, the Community League, the Takoma Park Citizens Association and the Takoma Park Horticultural Club.

He was an elder in the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, a former Sunday school superintendent and was active in the Brotherhood Club, serving as president.

A resident of 7309 Piney Branch rd., he leaves a wife, the former Miss Katherine McNaughton and a daughter, Mrs. Harris Richardson, of 20 Chesapeake st. se.

Errant Husbands Covet Ofstrom Doghouse

THIS CANINE GUEST HOUSE HAS BEDROOMS, SLEEPING PORCHES, PARLOR . . . people should have it so good!

By Ellen Buell Parry

AL OFSTROM, who lives on Old Georgetown pike, near Great Falls, has built a new guest house, all by himself—a guest house for dogs, exclusively!

It wasn't a case of "nothing's too good for our pets." Al and his wife, Vicki, recently redecorated their home and didn't want it mussed up by puppies.

This dog house, swankier by far than most of those occasionally occupied by errant Fairfax husbands, has two bedrooms, two inclosed sleeping porches and a living room. About all it lacks is a library and a television set.

Ten years ago the doctor ordered Al, top man in a Washington insurance agency, to retire to the country. The country part was fine but not retirement! It was Vick's idea to raise German shepherds. They started Asgard Kennels.

They have raised many fine dogs. Some have gone to the Seeing Eye; many have won prizes at dog shows all over the East. They had sold animals to people from Panama to the Philippines. The dogs DO hate to leave the Ofstrom guest house. People should have it so good!

RUSSELL FIORE and his wife Florence, who live at Fioredell, near Vienna, are both sculptors. Artists, yes, but they've got business heads as well.

A few years ago the Fiores thought Vienna should have a good drugstore, so they opened one—and made a "go" of it. In time they sold it and went back to sculptoring.

Florence says Russell is the real sculptor, insists she just dabbles in it. Russell says: "Look at this head that Florence did of Robert Frost, the poet . . . and look at that head she did of little Dudley Trenthan, daughter of our British friends, Noel and Mary Trenthan, of Langley. Florence is the sculptor!"

The answer is they're both good. And, meanwhile, if they get the notion Vienna needs something, from better mousetraps to autogiros, you'll probably see the Fiores back in business again.

EUGENE PIGGOTT is another who has found health and success by leaving the complexities of city life and returning to the soil.

As a country lad near Dranesville, he wasn't particularly thrilled by growing things; he dreamed of the banking world where greenbacks grew and where he might earn a sizable pile of them for himself.

Schooling over, he took a job in the Herndon Bank, progressed first to the bank in Vienna, then to one at Clarendon. Eventually, the Falls Church Bank—largest in Fairfax County—made him cashier.

Meantime, he and his wife, nee Ada Long, had bought a lovely six-acre place at Lewinsville. In spare hours he worked with flowers and vegetables, eventually grew to hate the banking world that took him away from his garden.

Feeling he would be happier—and healthier—he quit the bank. This took courage, since he had, besides a wife, two young daughters fast growing up and needing not only pretty clothes but also educations.

The move proved right. The Piggotts have made a big success selling flowers and vegetables, particularly small plants. Those two attractive daughters, Betty and Gene, have been well educated at Mary Washington College at Fredericksburg, and they've had those pretty clothes, too.

Completing the circle from farm to banking and back to the land again, the Piggotts have learned in the process that "not all that glitters is gold."

A "MODERN nursery service" is being offered parents who want to go to the Methodist Church at Herndon on Sundays. Members of the Adult Bible Class are acting as "sitters" from 11 a. m. to noon. Fathers and mothers may leave their children—no limit to the number—in their care, and attend the church service in peace and quiet, completely relaxed and free from parental responsibilities. This truly worthy project has as its chairman Mrs. Andrew Smith of Herndon.

THE BIGGEST boy scout in the Washington area, Richard E. Shands, lives near McLean, Va. He really only weighs 190 pounds, but he's the biggest scout because he is the chairman of the National Capital Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America. Dick is also a member of the Fairfax County School Board, a vestryman of Epiphany Church, as well as a working member of many civic organizations. He has a busy law practice in Washington.

Nothing But Happiness For Drucie and Major, Party Prediction Shows

By Marie McNair

THERE'S nothing but happiness in store for Drucie Snyder and Maj. John Horton, if only Mr. and Mrs. Lisle Smith's good omens will work.

The daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, and her fiance, who'll be married on January 26, were honor guests at lunch yesterday at Spring Glade, Mr. and Mrs. Smith's home in nearby Virginia. A silver horn of plenty overflowing with fruits and vegetables decorated the buffet table. In the horn also was a silver dollar indicating that the couple will be well endowed. The sprig of holly top-top signified that there would always be wood in the house for the fire; the berries that their friends' hearts will glow in all kinds of weather.

The guests, which included only the bridal party, were seated at a small table centered with miniature bridal bouquets of daisies.

Arent' Telling Which Anniversary It Was

"IT'S OUR wedding anniversary, yes, but we're not telling which one," said Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith yesterday at the reception which she and her husband gave at the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Mrs. Smith, slim as she must have been on her bridal day, wore black lace with a fitted bodice and full skirt with a peplum. And one of her anniversary remembrances was the corsage of purple orchids on her shoulder.

Among old and new friends who came to offer felicitations were the Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman, and Mrs. Chapman in a straight black suit and tiny white hat; the Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson, and Mrs. Donaldson who was among those presiding at the tea table; and Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, Treaurer of the Untied States, wearing a metallic brocade hat with her black frock.

Advice to Wives

Less Lipstick, More Domestic Bliss, He Says

By Cynthia Lowry

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—Lipstick smears, or reasonable facsimiles thereof, are the reason 1 out of 10 husbands desert their families.

At least that is the opinion of Dan Eisenberg, whose bread and butter comes from tracing missing persons. Eisenberg, who shies like a nervous horse from the words "private detective," estimates that in the last 25 years he has supervised the search for some 200,000 persons—of which 35,000 have been husbands who walked out and didn't come back.

Eisenberg has evolved a theory about lipstick stains and marriage. Roughly, it is this:

The wife finds something resembling lipstick stain on her husband's shirt or handkerchief. Instead of confronting him with her real or imaginary evidence and clearing up the matter, she builds up an exagerated idea of pappy's extracurricular interests. Ergo, she becomes a nag. First thing you know, the meal ticket can't take it any longer and there's another deserted wife.

Only Half Right

"Actually, I'd say that women become suspicious about lipstick in 1 out of every 10 of our missing husband cases," said Eisenberg. "On the basis of our investigations, I'd say they were right only about half the time."

It is significant, however, he added, that when a spouse departs, deserted wives immediately decide there is another woman in the case.

"Wives whose husbands have deserted them apparently can't imagine any other reason," he said. "From my observation, I'd say that where the scramming husband is over 40 years of age, there's rarely another woman involved."

"Disappearing husbands are, for the most part, good guys who just can't resist the urge to get away from it all for a little while."

Of course, there are errant husbands who really depart because of another woman—and stay gone. But most of the time the deserted wife figures it was, anyway—and some place along the line she can usually remember lipstick stains to back her up.

How to Sterilize A Silver Spoon

Would a sterling silver spoon be harmed if sterlized for infant feeding? If not, would it be best to submerge it in the boiling water or just place it on the rack so the steam would sterlize it?

MRS. M. D.

A sterling spoon might become tarnished if boiled, but there would be no permanent harm because the tarnish would come off readily with silver polish. Actually, immersing the spoon in boiling water is all that is necessary and is the usual procedure for use in infant feeding.

Attention R. L. of Chevy Chase, J. N. of Silver Spring, and V. G. D. of Washington: Here is the way I suggest you refinish your salad bowls. Sand the surface until absolutely smooth to remove all the loose finish. When sanding is complete, remove dust by wiping with a soft cloth. Now, apply one coat of a penetrating type of sealer to the bowls. One type is applied with a brush and the surface is wiped with a cloth almost immediately while wet to completely remove the sealer. Another product of this type is applied, allowed to dry, and rubbed with steel wool to remove filler from the surface. Both of these products can be purchased at well-stocked paint stoores.

I have a wool allergy, so my problem is how to keep warm at night. What about electric blankets? Aren't they wool, too? Can you or your readers give me some advice? L. L.

An electric sheet may be the answer to your problem. One of these, topped by a cotton blanket or down comforter, would keep you quite warm. Since the sheet gives out heat, all you need is a thick enough top covering to keep the warmth in the bed instead of drifting out through the room. Another idea is an electric comforter stuffed with either cotton or down.

I'm planning an early spring wedding and need lots of information about wedding and reception details.

What should ushers, best man, and bridegroom wear in a formal evening wedding in a church? What kind of dresses do the bridesmaids wear? What should they wear on their heads? Do they carry flowers?

Can you answer these few questions and also tell me where I can get a book or pamphlet giving more information?

J. L. N.

Correct attire for your future husband and his attendants—if the wedding is to be truly formal in the traditional manner—is full evening dress. This means a full-dress suit, high silk or opera hat, white waistcoat, white bow tie, stiff bosom shirt, wing collar, white kid gloves, patent leather pumps, black hose—and boutonniere! However, lots of people nowadays have what might be termed a semi-formal wedding. It strikes a happy medium in dress and tempo. The gentlemen wear tuxedos—which modern males are more likely to have than full dress. Black tie, hose, and oxfords fill the bill for accessories, plus boutonnierre.

For a formal or semi-formal evening wedding, the girl attendants wear evening or dinner gowns, with long gloves or lace mitts. Flowers for the hair or small evening hats are appropriate. And they carry bouquets.

For more information, either visit your public library and look up books on wedding etiquette or buy some such volume as "Your Wedding—How to Plan and Enjoy It," by Marjorie B. Woods (Bobbs Merrill.) To get a helpful pamphlet on the subject, send 25 cents to The Washington Post Reader Service, 243 West 17th st., New York 11, N. Y., requesting Booklet 203, "How to Plan Your Wedding."

How about dyeing articles in an automatic washer? Just how is it done? Is the dye poured in on top of the article? And how about the three rinses? Don't they remove the dye?

E. R. R.

Bona fide dyeing requires boiling, so the home washing machine is out as far as that is concerned. However, a good tint job can be done in certain types of automatic washers.

Some makers advise using their machines for this purpose; others do not recommend it. So I'd suggest calling the service department of the makers of your machine for advice in this regard.

If the maker has no local office, there's probably a wholesale distributor here with a home service department. You can get the name of this distributor through your retail store, I believe.

To A. A. M., who requested the recipe for a large quantity of cookie mix, here's one:

OATMEAL COOKIE MIX
3 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 teaspoons salt
2½ cups sugar
1 cup shortening
3 cups rolled oats (quick or old fashioned, uncooked)

Sift flour, soda, baking powder, salt, and sugar together three times. Cut shortening into sifted dry ingredients until mixture resembles corn meal. Add rolled oats and mix well. Store in covered container at room temperature.

Keep in Trim

In the Market for a Smaller Size? Try These Exercises

By Ida Jean Kain

ARE YOU in the market for a smaller size? This is the right department, madame . . . alterations. Slim off 2 bulging inches and you'll be able to fit into a whole-size smaller dress.

To get down to cases . . . If you've graduated from a slim 16 to an 18, or alas from a youthful 18 to a mature 20, you'd give anything to slip smoothly into a whole size smaller. Then why not? Just trim 2 inches from the three figure-controlling measurements—the waist, the abdomen and the hips.

How many pounds between sizes? With overweight, it's generally around 10. But it may or may not be a matter of poundage. With flabby muscles you can require a larger size than your weight actually warrants. When flabby muscles are back of the measurement spread, exercise to restore muscle tone is the answer.

Begin in the middle with the waistline. An extra inch on the waistline cramps your style . . . two extra inches jumps your size. The toning technique is to stretch, bend and twist, but take it easy and make a separate exercise out of each movement. Use the handle off the carpet sweeper, or cut off an old broom handle, for a prop.

Position: Stand tall, feet apart, grasp the stick in both hands and hold it close to chest, hands well apart.

Movement: lift the stick high overhead toward the ceiling, pulling the waist up out of the hips. Return stick to chest and stretch it out in front as far as you can reach. Then back to chest, stretch up, back to chest, stretch forward. Repeat 3 to 6 times. Add a bend . . .

Position: Stand on knees, knees well apart, with stick stretched high overhead.

Movement: Holding the stretch, bend slowly to the side and touch end of stick to floor. Stretch up again, hold, then bend and touch stick to floor at opposite side. Repeat slowly 6 times, later 12. Now a twist . . .

Position: Stand with stick behind shoulders, hands folded over ends of stick.

Movement: Swing arms from one side to the other, twisting gently at the waistline. Swing for six counts or so, using the waist as a pivot. This twisting exercise is safe only for those who have a normally strong back.

Smartest Dresses Lead Many Lives

Long experience has taught me that economics often give rise to new fashion trends. This is certainly true of the important new fashion of costumes that do tricks—that can lead many lives.

We practical Americans have always liked "double duty" dresses. Since clothes have become so expensive in Paris that smart women must think twice before buying, the French dress makers have turned their great talents to designing costumes that are changeable in both use and appearance.

So now we have dresses that start as slim sheaths and become full-skirted via wide tie-on skirts; "shutter" necklines that open to change day-time frocks into cocktail dresses; sleeves that button on and off; and others.

I call these "presto change" dresses and I'll discuss them more later.

Oscar Levant Is Soloist With Symphony

By Richard Keith

Oscar Levant, popular radio and screen pianist, appeared as soloist at the third of the National Symphony Orchestra's Sunday series yesterday afternoon in Constitution Hall.

The program was largely made up of "Pops Concert" music, including Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" Overture, Khachaturian's Piano Concerto, Ibert's Divertissement, and Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue. Finding the Prelude to Wagner's "Lohengrin," which was played following the intermission, in such surroundings was about as surprising as discovering the Holy Grail in a novelty shop.

It is practically impossible to take the Khachaturian Concerto as a serious piece of music. In spite of its virtuoso writing and heroic pretensions, its musical ideas are few and singularly banal. If there were some reasonable development of them, the composition might be saved, but there is virtually no development at all.

For tension and climax, the composer merely writes faster or louder music, or both. Considered as a brilliant display of fireworks, the concerto is a success.

Ibert's Divertissement is completely successful, on the other hand, because it makes no pretensions, and is precisely what it professes to be—a diversion. Much of it is pure parody, done with the typical trenchant wit of a clever Frenchman.

Levant's stage presence is somewhat deceiving. He appears to have about the same interest in his piano as a stenographer has in her typewriter around four in the afternoon. The music that he produces, however, is well calculated and clearly projected. It would be interesting to hear him play some really profound music some time.

The orchestra, under Mitchell's direction, played up to the standard which we have begun to expect of them this year. The strings deserve mention for their distinguished performance in the "Lohengrin" prelude.

After intermission, Mrs. Hans A. Klagsbrunn, Second Vice President of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, spoke to the audience in behalf of the 1950-51 sustaining fund campaign. Let us hope this year's response will be quick and generous.

One on the Aisle—

'Tobacco Road' Is With Us Again

By Richard L. Coe

BEFORE THE SAME set which saw 3182 New York performances, "Tobacco Road" is now being acted by the Negro Drama Group at the Howard Theater.

Jack Kirkland, who adapted the play from Erskine Caldwell's novel, is presenting the production, which he plans to take to New York's Apollo Theater and then to Chicago, where the play's earlier history covers a mere eight-weeks and a volume of legal red tape.

Having seen a half-dozen of the play's previous performances, I'd say the outstanding impression of watching this one is that one immediately forgets that these are Negro players. Though it is not an ideal presentation, it is a curious fact that the characters remain people, that they do not seem to be something apart from the tragic poor whites of Caldwell's book.

The startling coarseness of Jeeter Lester's tribe is, to be sure, the factor which built it into one of the freaks of the American theater. When Henry Hull first opened it December 4, 1933, the notices were more than drab. For the first three weeks of its fabulous life, the cast expected the closing notice nightly. Cut-rate tickets, a thumping editorial in the New York Daily News and rock-bottom salaries for the cast pulled it through.

Hull played the part—and with far more depth than anyone else—for 1000 performances, to be succeeded by a long line of Jeeters, many of whom appeared here at both the Belasco and the National.

Powell Lindsay is the current Jeeter, fine in the first act, too vaudevillian in the second to get the impact of the drama and fair in the third. He is a young, well-fed Jetter and after his milking of that historic act opening he's unable to get at the core of Jeeter; you just don't believe him.

Evelyn Ellis, as his wife (created by Margaret Wycherly), also directed the production and gives to the role that depth of despair which is the true horror of this human trash. Jimmy Wright is a fine Dude and John Tate a persuasive Lov; from whose home the pretty Lester girl has fled.

Singing Moments Effective

Helen Dowdy has a rich conception of Sister Bessie, that amorous church-founder who talks privately with God. Miss Dowdy has the inspiration, and the voice, to play her as a singing evangelist and her lapses into song with Miss Ellis are the evening's highlights. Baby Joyce is a hair-raising Jukes of an Ellie May, a demented creature fresh from Bechuanaland. Estelle Hemsley is effective as the silent grandma and Dolores Mack is Pearl.

As in the past, the sordid and sensational had their pull with the opening night house, much as I was remarking yesterday on the more coarse moments of "A Streetcar Named Desire." It is interesting to note that both these plays about the unfortunate should have their popular appeal through the very factors which bring about their tragedies.

What the future will be of this rebirth of "Tobacco Road" isn't easy to gauge. The device of making the Lesters Negroid is perfectly acceptable. Their plight is as real as the Caucasian Lesters and as believable.

But I don't think it likely my favorite "TR" story will be repeated. This concerns a young lady from Kentucky, ambitious for a stage career. For two years she haunted the Gotham production offices, determined to be an actress. Finally discouraged, she'd bought a ticket home the very day she learned of a vacancy coming up in the two-year-old play. She got the part, cashed in her ticket.

And for three years she was a member of the cast at the Forrest, luxuriating in a career, a ghost that walked regularly. Finally she could stand it no more. She handed in her notice, headed for marriage in Kentucky and hasn't longed for the stage since.

"TR's" resurgence also recalls one of Don Marquis' archy compositions. Wrote archy:

Look in the Book by Bell

A farmer faces the facts

For more than 150 years, farmers and their families have looked in The Old Farmer's Almanac for everything from household hints to next winter's weather. In addition to the wealth of information it contains, the Almanac entertains its readers with such quips as this: "To S.A.S., Weston, Mass. In answer to your question as to whether the stock market is going up or down this year, we beg to state that if you think it will go up, it will go down, and vice versa."

Whenever you forget the facts...

When you know the location of a business but can't remember the name, look in the YELLOW PAGES, your Classified Telephone Directory. Suppose, for example, you want the name of the restaurant at Fourth and X Streets. Just turn to the heading "Restaurants" in the YELLOW PAGES, run down the list of addresses and in a few seconds you'll have the name. It's just as easy to find the address or telephone number when you know the name, or part of the name. To save time and find exactly what you want, all you have to do is look in the book.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company.

Howat Named To Red Cross Gift Post

P. Y. K. Howat, president of the Howat Concrete Co., has accepted chairmanship of the special gifts division in the coming Red Cross Metropolitan area fund drive, the Red Cross announced yesterday.

Howat has set February 7 as the date of the division's first report luncheon.

Preliminary planning for the $1,039,000 Red Cross Washington metropolitan area campaign got under way Friday in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co.

Vice chairmen and area chairmen were requested by City Division Chairman Robert Lee O'Brien, jr., to have their team captains enlisted by January 30, with all workers selected by February 15. The drive will start March 1. O'Brien announced the following vice chairmen have been appointed: Knut I. Nilsson, Robert W. Fleming, C. Carney Smith, E. W. Offut, jr., and Frank W. Lee.

Area chairmen, announced yesterday, were: V. R. Philpot, Mrs. David G. Tavan, George Cox, Philip S. Bowie, Jerome Howell, Norman Farquhar, Eugene C. Gott, III; O. W. Lloyd, Robert E. L. Johnson, William S. Escavaille, Charles E. Krey, Paul J. Bissett, Bruce Keiner and Lewis M. Firey. Mrs. Ann Donnelly is assistant director, and Mrs. Sophia C. Fox, secretary in the city division.

Printed Works By Franklin On Exhibition

Coinciding with the start of "International Printing Week," an exhibit of work by Benjamin Franklin, printer, opened yesterday at the Library of Congress.

The exhibit devoted to the "patron saint of American printers," the 244th anniversary of whose birthday is Tuesday, will remain on view until February 28.

The exhibit, small and choice, suggests not only Franklin's long years of activity as a printer, but the wide range of his interests.

A pamphlet, "An Account of the new-invented Pennsylvania fireplaces," dated 1744, recalls his invention of the famous Franklin stove, while "A Proposal for promoting useful knowledge among the British Plantations in America," printed by B. Franklin the preceding year, contains his suggestion for the formation of the American Philosophical Society—"today the oldest existing learned society in America."

From this same period are Indian treaties printed by Franklin, proclamations and "Acts of the General Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania."

Franklin the newspaperman is represented by a copy of his "Gazette," and Franklin the diplomat by a single-sheet form printed at the private press he established at Passy while serving in France during the American Revolution.

A reminder that Franklin when a young man had his "ups and downs," is a copy of William Woolaston's 'The Religion of Nature Delineated,' printed by S. Palmer, 1725." Franklin was not quite 19 years old when he arrived in England, only to find his patron without funds. The stranded youth went to work in the London printing shop of Palmer in this time of type set by hand, and worked as a compositor on this book.

Two copies of M. T. Cicero's "Cato Major, or his discourse of Old-Age," are on display. One of the copies, "Printed and Sold by B. Franklin, 1774," is open to show the tastefully simple title-page printed in red and black. The other copy is opened to show the setting of the body matter.

The "Cato Major" is often described as the handsomest book printed by Franklin, and is sometimes said to be the handsomest book printed in Colonial America.

AEC Seen Split On H-Bomb Issue

By the United Press

Radio Commentator Drew Pearson last night said the United States Atomic Energy Commission is sharply divided on whether this country should undertake to build a hydrogen superbomb that would be one thousand times as destructime as present A-bombs.

In his weekly program over the American Broadcasting Co. network, Pearson said Commissioner Lewis L. Strauss is leading a faction that contends that Russia will build such a bomb eventually and the United States should try to do so first.

Commission Chairman David E. Lilenthal, according to Pearson, is leading a fight to head off the superbomb project on the ground that it would open the way to mass murder of the human race.

Movie Pianist of Silent Era Recalls 'Galloping' Scores

The Washington Post

Mrs. Hungerford as she played for silent movies, and today

When the action on the screen galloped—46 years ago—so did the music, according to Mrs. Katherine Lane Hungerford.

Mrs. Hungerford, 71, believes she may have been the first person to accompany motion pictures on a piano in a Washington theater, suiting the mood of the music to the action and sometimes skittering through hasty transitions in the process.

Looking back to the summer of 1903, when she played a battered piano at the Hall of the Ancients, she said:

"This picture show was high class. It was in a large room with a stage, with a screen on the stage. My piano was on a platform to the right of the screen, and I would have to keep twisting my neck to see what was going on on the screen.

"I had no notes or score, just played out of my head. It seemed to be satisfactory, because I had no complaints."

Kisses Too Much

The Hall of the Ancients, she recalled, was between 18th and 14th sts. on New York ave. nw., about where the Capital Garage is located.

She got her job through the secretary to Franklin Smith, who owned the hall. "Thomas Armatt, who invented some kind of a movie machine, was associated with Smith," she recounts. "The hall had a Pompeiian Room and a Roman Room, among others, and was filled with objects Smith collected during his summer travels. Admission was 50 cents.

"They had the first movies on the second floor of the hall—and later on they had them on 9th st.," she said.

"I played there nights—in the Government we got out at 4 p. m. in those days—for about $5 a week.

"One of the first pictures was the coronation of King Edward. It was a very beautiful picture. And of course we had comedies and things like that. One comedy had a lot of kissing in it, and Mr. Smith was quite conservative, so we took it off the screen. May Irwin and John Rice played in it.

"I had to play whatever I thought was suitable. They left it entirely to me. I played by ear. At that time, I could hear a piece played once and go home and play it on the piano. I couldn't do that now.

"'Bedelia' was a popular song in those days—like 'Mule Train' now—every hurdygurdy in Washington had it. 'Every Morn I Send Thee Violets' was another. 'Whispering Hope,' a pretty song that my mother used to sing, and which has been revived, was popular, too. I also played pieces from the operas."

After several months Mrs. Hungerford gave up playing at the museum, finding it too difficult to work nights and days at the Department of Agriculture.

Daughter of a widowed mother, and from a long line of Southern Presbyterian ministers, she was born in Monticello, Ga. She arrived in Washington July 1, 1902, "to study music, and do a lot of other things I wanted to do, for which I felt there was no opportunity in the South.

Family Feared for Her

"When I left home the whole family came to the depot and wrung their hands because I was coming alone to that awful place—Washington—although there were plenty of friends here."

The perky Georgian, a widow now, lives with her sister, Miss Jennie M. Lane, at 2928 Wheaton rd., Kensington, Md., next door to their brother, Charles Lane, manager and buyer for Woodward & Lothrop's food department.

Always a great theater lover, Mrs. Hungerford recalls the days when she and her young friends would scramble up seven or eight flights of stairs to see the shows from the gallery.

She still goes to the movies, and vividly recalls the year, May, 1922, to May, 1923, she spent in Hollywood. She photographed many of the silent stars, and has published a book about it, "Early Hollywood Crazy Quilt."

"It was the happiest year of my life," she said yesterday.

Leads Traced In Fairfax Inlet Slaying

Fairfax County police said last night they have "several possible leads" to the slaying of Mrs. Charlotte Meekins, whose battered body was found beside a Hunting Creek inlet early Saturday.

Chief Carl McIntosh said detectives had located several acquaintances of the dead woman, and had obtained "some information" on her activities Friday night, when she presumably was slain. He said a break in the case "might come within 48 hours."

Meanwhile, police said a preliminary, unofficial coroner's report indicated the woman died of drowning after she was left on the shore of the inlet, badly beaten. An examination by an Arlington Hospital pathologist showed water in her lungs, establishing that she was still alive before her body was submerged by tidewater, according to detectives.

Dr. Nelson Podolnick, Fairfax coroner, is withholding an official report pending completion of tests, police said.

Mrs. Meekins, 29, of no fixed address, was found dead beside the inlet by a Belle Haven Country Club caretaker around 7:15 a. m. Saturday. Because of the condition of her clothing and underclothing, police said they believe she was raped.

Belgian Cuts Cow-Feeding Cost, He Says

A Belgian wants an American manufacturer to build a machine he has invented that will feed 10 cows a day on a daily contribution of 33 pounds of grain.

Here is his story as put out by the Office of International Trade of the Commerce Department:

Herbageres Perin of Vaux-Sous-Chevremont, Belgium, says his machine will grow fresh fodder for farm animals indoors.

Corn, he said, or other grain will grow 10 inches in six days. The metal machine is 3 feet wide, 6 feet deep and 7 feet high. It has six compartments.

By planting each compartment with about 33 pounds of seed each day, in six days' time it will produce 220 to 275 pounds of cow feed.

That, says Perin, is enough to feed 10 cows a day.

The rapid plant growth, the OIT says, is produced by a secret solution that, the Belgian says, is inexpensive.

He wants to license an American concern to build and sell the machine in this country.

The Belgian offer is one of a wide range of import, export, licensing and business agency opportunities listed at OIT.

Woman Jumps To Her Death After Quarrel

The wife of a Fort Belvoir (Va.) sergeant jumped to her death from the 14th st. bridge early yesterday after an argument with her husband.

She was Mrs. Nathalie L. Jenkins, 30, wife of M/Sergt. James W. Jenkins, a tuberculosis patient at the Fort Belvoir Hospital.

Sergeant Jenkins told police he had left the hospital at about 4 a. m. to make a surprise visit to their home, which is on the post. Mrs. Jenkins was not there, and when she returned some time later an argument broke out and she left again, he said.

Police learned that Mrs. Jenkins had hailed a cab driven by Howard R. Wall, 38, of RFD Route 4, Alexandria. She told the driver to take her to Washington, but stopped him and got out at the Virginia end of the bridge, Wall told police. It was then about 7 a. m.

Suspicious, Wall looked back as he drove away and saw Mrs. Jenkins climb over the bridge rail and jump. She was also seen by a bridge guard, William C. Bell, 42, of 1248 Columbia rd. nw. They notified police and a harbor patrol boat recovered the body at about 7:30 a. m.

District Coroner Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

U. S. Studies Experience of Bombed Cities

NYHT News Service

The United States Government is studying British, Nazi and Japanese techniques for the handling of bombed-out urban populations against the "if and when" day the United States is subjected to such air attacks, it was learned yesterday.

The first of such reports on how both friends and enemies met the situation is one on Germany, whose centers were targets for allied "saturation" day and night bombing. It already has been written, and may be released and distributed for the guidance of State and municipal authorities within the next week.

Similar studies are being made in Japan, where cities were subjected during the latter days of the war to terrific American high explosive and fire-bombing attacks culminating in the release of two atomic bombs over Hirohsima and Nagasaki, and in England, where London and other cities earlier in the war were subjected to Nazi blitz attacks.

The studies are part of the overall mobilization planning being carried out under the direction of the National Security Resources Board, top civilian war planning agency composed of the Secretaries of State, Treasury, Defense, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor under the acting chairmanship of Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman.

The first in the series of such reports was released last Sunday jointly by the NSRB, the Defense Department, and the Atomic Energy Commission, and dealt with the problems of medical care in the event of atomic bombing of American cities.

Canadian Atom Chief Will Visit U. S. Workshops

By The Associated Press

Dr. C. J. Mackenzie, head of Canada's Atomic Energy Control Board, will visit two United States atomic laboratories this month.

The United States Atomic Energy Commission said the Canadian scientist's visit is part of the exchange program worked out between this country, Canada and Britain in 1948. This program does not include atomic weapons or production information.

The AEC said Dr. Mackenzie will visit the Argonne National Laboratory at Chicago Tuesday. He will spend January 23 and 24 inspecting the University of California radiation laboratory at Berkeley, Calif.

The commission said the purpose of the visit was to permit a study of such matters as administration, construction costs and research programs so as to avoid duplication of research effort in the two countries.

Virginia Program For Jewish Aged Care Approved

Richmond, Va., Jan. 15 (AP).—A Statewide plan for the care of Virginia's aged Jewish people has been approved by the Richmond Jewish Community Council's board of directors, President Lewis C. Market announced today.

The plan calls for the Richmond Council to join with similar groups in Porthmouth, Newport News, Norfolk and other cities to provide care and services for the needy aged.

All Jewish councils in Virginia will have responsibility for financial support of the Beth Sholom Home for the Aged in Richmond and will also be entitled to it for residence, Market explained.

Filter Is Made To Eliminate Car Oil Change

Maryville, Tenn., Jan. 15 (U.P.).—An engineer today announced the development of a filter that he said permits a car to be driven without ever changing the motor oil.

The filter is being developed by the Aluminum Company of America, he said.

The filter does not maintain the oil supply, he said, and it must be replenished as it is spent by the engine. But the oil is kept so clean that it eliminates nine-tenths of the wear to a motor from sludge, he said.

J. E. Housley, who engineered the use of the filter, which he called a "treater," said it has been installed in Aluminum Company of America vehicles at an estimated saving of $300 in the maintenance of each engine during 40,000 miles of driving. He is district power manager in charge of Alcoa's chain of dam projects.

Housley foresees a day when service station attendants simply will take a new cartridge from the shelf and slide it into the filter every 2000 miles.

The cartridge contains activated alumina, obtained in the processing of aluminum ore. It is so highly porous that a small fragment has more surface area than a living-room floor.

Alumina looks like small white pebbles. Its pores suck the acids from oil. Housley said acid is the basis of sludge, which turns oil dark, eats the lead out of bearings and acts like sandpaper on the cylinder walls, pistons and valves of a motor.

Housley estimated it will cost eight million dollars to put the filters in service stations over the country. They will sell for about $3 each, he said.

'This I Remember'

Recognition of Russia Opposed by Roosevelt's Old Friends

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1924 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

I TOOK many, many people to see this village of Arthurdale, West Virginia, along Scott's Run, for it was a good example of what absentee ownership could do as far as human beings were concerned. The coal mines of West Virginia are owned largely by people not living in the State. The money goes out and does not come back, leaving the State poorer in cash and in personal interest. Most of the people living along the Run, which flows into a broader stream below, worked no more than two or three days a week. Some of the children were subnormal, and I often wondered how any of them grew up.

You felt as though the coal dust had seeped into every crack in the houses and it was impossible to get them or the people in them clean. When you walked into a kitchen you were struck by the scarcity of cooking utensils. The families were almost always large, but it was rare to see more than two or three cups and plates on the shelves, some of them chipped or broken.

Where there was a company store every family always owed a bill. As they were thus kept permanently in debt they could never move away.

The homestead projects were attacked in Congress, for the most part by men who had never seen the plight of the miners nor the things we were trying to do for them. There is no question that much money was spent, perhaps some of it unwisely. The projects were all experimental.

Nevertheless, I have always felt that through the homesteads many human beings who might have cost us thousands of dollars in tuberculosis sanitariums, insane asylums and jails were restored to usefulness and given confidence in themselves.

Later during the war I met boys from that area. I could not help thinking that a great many of them were able to serve their country only because of the things that had been done to help their parents through the depression period.

At the time of an act one is not likely to realize its future ramifications. My trips into this area as well as my lecture trips turned out to have an unsuspected value when I visited the men in hospitals during the war. Frequently a boy in a hospital bed would say: "I come from ——. You made the commencement address at my school." Then I would try to remember something about his town. A lonely boy in a hospital bed in some far-off place will often feel better about the world if somebody remembers the town square or the courthouse in his home town.

Nothing Learned Wasted

NOTHING we learn in this world is ever wasted, and I have come to the conclusion that practically nothing we do ever stands by itself. If it is good it will serve some good purpose in the future. If it is evil, it may haunt us and handicap our efforts in unimagined ways.

Oh yes, the human values were most rewarding, even if the financial returns to the Government were not satisfactory.

Two other events of that first autumn in Washington stand out in my mind. On November 17, 1933, Henry Morgenthau, jr., was sworn in as Undersecretary of the Treasury in the Oval Room in the White House, thus starting on his long and arduous labors in the Department. When Secretary Woodin resigned, Morgenthau succeeded him and held the office until shortly after my husband's death, when he also resigned and left Washington.

On that same day my husband and Mr. Litvinoff held the final conversations on the recognition of the Soviet Union. There was considerable excitement over the first telephone conversation between the two countries; it took place between Mr. Litvinoff in the White House and his wife and son in Russia. The ushers noted it in their daily record book because, although there had been overseas conversations with many other European countries, this was the opening of diplomatic relations with Russia.

My husband used to talk of one particular point in these negotiations, which dealt with the freedom of religious practice in Russia. He insisted that when any recognized religious group had more than a certain number of members it should be permitted to have a pastor, minister or priest, as the case might be, to carry on religious services and perform whatever church rites were desired. He obtained assurance that this permission would be granted, though at first there was some hesitation.

Friends Get Shock

NEEDLESS to say, among some of my husband's old friends there was considerable opposition to the recognition of Russia. His mother came to him before the announcement was officially made. She told him she had heard rumors that the United States was about to recognize Russia but that she felt this would be a disastrous move and widely misunderstood by a majority of their old friends. My husband told me this with amusement, adding that he thought his mother was entirely correct and that probably many of his old friends were going to have to put up with a number of shocks in the years to come. This was a truth that proved itself many times over during his Presidency.

The opening of diplomatic intercourse with Russia and concern for our relations in this hemisphere were the Administration's first points of attack in our foreign policy, but the major emphasis in those years was and had to be on questions of domestic policy and our internal economic recovery.

As I look back over the actual measures which were undertaken in this first year I realize that the one thing in which my husband took the greatest pleasure was the establishment on April 5, 1933, of the Civilian Conservation Corps camps. The idea was his own contribution to the vast scheme of relief rehabilitation planning. The CCC, which was of such value to the young men of the Nation, held an abiding interest for Franklin. It was one of the things he felt might well have become permanent.

This was followed on June 16 by the National Recovery Act, with Gen. Hugh Johnson in charge. The basic importance of the NRA was that it made it easier for the industrialist who wanted to do the right thing. The chiseler and the man who was willing to profit by beating down his labor could no longer compete unfairly with the man who wanted only to earn a decent profit but to treat his employes fairly. The NRA was declared unconstitutional almost two years later, but I have always felt that it had a very good effect.

PWA Created

THE Public Works Administration, which came into being on the same day, made it possible for the Government to plan and undertake public works during this period of depression. It helped to take up the slack of unemployment by lending money to the States for projects that they could not finance by themselves.

Five months later, in November, 1933, the Civil Works Administration was set up and in time put four million unemployed to work.

In my travels around the country I saw many things built by PWA and CWA. I also saw the results of work done by CCC. The achievements of these agencies began to dot city and rural areas alike; soil conservation and forestry work went forward, recreation areas were built, and innumerable bridges, schools and hospitals were erected. Each of them is a lasting monument to the good work done under these agencies. It is true they cost the people of the country vast sums of money, but they did a collective good and left tangible results which are still visible today.

The old story of the men who leaned on their shovels and shirked was, of course true here and there. On the whole, however, the United States can be proud of these projects, which helped pull the country out of the depression and made it possible for us to fight the greatest and most expensive war in our history.

Perhaps the most far-reaching project was the beginning of the Tennessee Valley Authority. That was Senator George Norris' greatest dream. No one who witnessed the development of the Authority will every forget the fight he put up for something that many people ridiculed. The development had been begun during World War I, but at the end of the war most of the work was stopped. Nothing further was done until my husband, who well understood Senator Norris' vision, supplied an impetus at a time when it could accomplish the maximum results for the country.

Much Misery

IN THE CAMPAIGN of 1932 my husband and I had gone through some of this TVA area, and he had been deeply impressed by the crowds at the stations. They were so poor—their houses were unpainted, their cars were dilapidated—and many grown ups as well as children were without shoes or adequate garments. Scarcely eight years later I went through the same area, and a more prosperous area would have been hard to find. I have always wished that those who oppose authorities to create similar benefits in the valleys of other great rivers could have seen the contrasts as I saw it.

I realize that such changes must come gradually, but I hate to see nothing done. I wish, as my husband always wished, that year by year we might be making a start on the Missouri River and the headwaters of the Mississippi. Such experiments would be a great bulwark against attacks on our democracy, for they improve the life of the people.

Your Wish Is Mine

If there is anything you wish . . . Tomorrow or today . . . You merely have to speak the words. . . . That you would like to say . . . For they are bound to be the words . . . That I would like to hear . . . So I may know your slightest whim . . . And I may serve you, dear . . . I want to do whatever you . . . Could ever ask of me . . . To please your heart with all my love . . . And all my sympathy . . . I long to bring you hapiness . . . Each morning and each night . . . And polish up the sun and stars . . . To keep them ever bright . . . So tell me now whatever words . . . Your lips would like to say . . . And I will light your lamp of joy . . . And take your tears away.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Air-Conditioning Is No Lure This Season

Louise T. Bissell of Bethesda, Md., reports that a drive-in theater on U. S. Route 40, just outside Wheeling, W. Va., displays a sign which says:

"Baby It's Cold Outside. Closed For The Season."

STREET SCENE

Our reporter for this one is Harry Traub of Arlington, Va.:

As the bus proceeded out 16th st., two passengers fell to arguing.

The tall one had been drinking, and became abusive. The short one resented it. As the argument mounted toward a climax, the bus stopped for a traffic light and the two men got off to settle their differences.

The big guy swung a drunken haymaker. The little fellow ducked, and countered with a solid punch to the nose. The drunk went reeling up against a tree.

The traffic light changed and the victor stepped back aboard the bus. But before it could move away, the little fellow said, "Wait a minute."

Stepping outside again, he picked up the loser's hat, and then the loser himself, and steered him back into the bus.

"No use making him late for dinner," he explained to his fellow passengers. The rest of the trip was completed in silence.

SPARK, FIRE & BURNS

The 191st birthday of Scotland's National poet, Robert Burns, will be celebrated in fitting style on the 25th of this month with toasts, songs and dances.

The occasion will be the annual Burns Night Dinner at the Shoreham (for reservations call District 6065), sponsored by the St. Andrew's Society of Washington.

The Scotch are supposed to be a very thrifty people. But in Bobby Burns they've presented the world with a priceless gift whose value seems to grow with the years.

There are any number of examples of his master's touch. Tam's wife, "gathering her brows like gathering storm, nursing her wrath to keep it warm," is a very good one. As are the well-known lines, "Oh wad some power the giftie gie us, to see oursels as others see us."

Burns' works abound with passages which have become familiar quotations. Like: "The best laid schemes o' mice and men gang aft a-gley."

But if any single stanza can sum up his universal appeal down through the years, I'd say it is the one from "Epistle to John Lapraik" which goes:

Gie me ae spark o' nature's fire,
That's a' the learning I desire;
Then tho' I drudge thro' dub an' mire
At pleugh or cart,
My Muse, though hamely in attire,
May touch the heart.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

You mentioned the name Charles Stofberg the other day. This wouldn't be the same Charles Stofberg who did "Curbstone Queries" in front of The Washington Post 10 years ago, would it? If it is, ask him about the chicken dinner I gave him one day, and give me his address so I can write to him.

Everett Lane
Mine Run, Va.

Dear Everett:

You have uncovered a chapter of the Stofberg career I never suspected existed.

Charley puts the time as 1934 to 1936. He says John Heiney, then radio editor of this paper and now an advertising executive in New York, was the star of the program.

"I was his assistant," says Charley, "and for better or for worse, I think it was the first man-on-the-street program ever broadcast from here."

Heiney also wrote the "Professor Quiz" show, I'm told, and was the first one to put Arthur Godfrey on a network program. (If I don't get some arguments on that one, I'll be disappointed, because half the people in Washington claim to have given Arthur his start.)

Nevertheless, Charley remembered you instantly, and also the joke about the "chicken dinner" to which you treated him, and which turned out to be a candy bar bearing that name.

You can address him at the District Building, Washington. He's special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young.

INDIVIDUALIST

Poet Pop Grey reports that an old fellow with a hearing aid was complaining about the music on streetcars the other day.

"Why don't you turn off your hearing aid if you don't care for the music?" asked his companion.

"What!" replied the old gaffer. "And miss all those nice commercials?"

SUSIE Q. SMITH

"Sure Susie is home! . . . C'M'ON IN!"

Two Cited For Fighting Racketeers

By Drew Pearson

When Estes Kefauver, hard-hitting new Senator from Tennessee, starts his important investigation of interstate gambling rackets, one of the first witnesses ought to be fearless Mayor Gordon Dunn of Fresno, Calif. Another should be Warren Olney, the energetic lawyer whom straight-shooting Governor Earl Warren placed in charge of the California Crime Commission.

Kefauver

A lot has been written about gambling king Frankie Costello, his tailor-made clothes and his lunches at the Waldorf. But the real story of Costello is the way the national gambling network of which he is a part undermines clean government in the smaller cities of the United States of America.

Fresno, Calif., noted chiefly as the "raisin capital of the world," is a long way from New York, Chicago, or Costello's reported friends in Washington. However, there seems to be an invisible but definite link between them just the same.

In San Mateo not long ago, gambler Emelio Georgetti, otherwise known as "Gombo," was investigated by local T-men regarding $400,000 worth of hidden income in the form of cashiers checks in the Bank of America.

But when William Berket, the local Treasury agent, tried to follow up the case, he was called off by Washington.

The same thing happened when Al Gionotti, a slot-machine operator in San Mateo, was caught hiding income from slot-machine rentals. T-men, painstakingly interviewing drugstores and others renting slot machines, found that Gionotti had concealed between $50,000 and $100,000 of income.

The far-flung links of the national gambling empire were further illustrated at Fresno when two Chicago gunmen, Broncotto and Pedrotti, were caught sticking up a tavern, "The Big Headed Kid," and when Fresno's local gambling czar, Joe Cannon, couldn't raise the bail, he collected it from Los Angeles gambling leader "Mickey" Cohen.

How the gangs undermine good government is further illustrated by the fact that Fresno prosecutor Jim Theusen was offered $20,000 to drop the indictments. However, he reported the offer to the judge, and, despite political pressure from two State senators, Jack Tenney and Hugh Burns, sent the two gangsters to jail.

Last April, Fresno held an important municipal election, put in as mayor bulky shot-put star Gordon Dunn, who campaigned on a "closed city" platform. Dunn proposed to close up the gamblers and run the houses of prostitution out of Fresno.

One gambler walked into Dunn's office, laid $35,000 on the mayor's desk, and announced that that was the price he would pay for opening only one bookmaking establishment. Dunn kicked him out of the office.

This type of pressure was not difficult to resist. More difficult were the approaches from men who had helped elect him. One of these was Bob Franklin, now under Federal indictment on another matter, and one of Dunn's campaign managers. Franklin had also helped handle the campaign of California Attorney General Fred Howser in that part of the State and has been close to Howser.

Meanwhile Joe Cannon, sometimes called the Mickey Cohen of Fresno, proposed that Fresno's chief of police be removed—always the first step when the gamblers and racketeers want to take over.

Terrific pressure on Mayor Dunn continued, with certain merchants claiming that Dunn's "Closed City" policy hurt business. On the other hand, Chet Carey, secretary of Fresno's A. F. of L. Central Labor Council, backed the mayor to the limit.
